HOLD SUSPECT AS BOY SLAYER

Grieves For Slain Son

State, City Join Drive to Protect Children

Clear-eyed and calm now, Mrs. Arnold Harris sits in the living room of her home with her two-year-old daughter, Enith, on Rockwell street, Cambridge, quietly thankful that the confessed slayer of her young son, Chester, has finally been captured. For months the killer brought a living grief to this quiet family. "I knew they finally would capture him," she says. But nothing that can happen now will bring back the curly-headed son who disappeared from his home in October, 1936. AUTO RATES TO DROP

BOSTON, FEW TOWNS DUE FOR CUT

Boston's compulsory automobile insurance rates are due for a drop.

This is the forecast after State House experts today completed a detailed study of the state accident records.

State Insurance Commissioner Francis J. De Celles, while refusing to confirm this report, did not deny that a decrease was due in Boston.

It is also determined that there will be a general decrease in other Massachusetts towns.

Increases in large cities, outside of Boston, were expected.

Decreases will appear in the smaller towns in the state.

Commissioner De Celles has not arrived at the final findings on which he will set the rates he stated, adding he hoped to finish with the calculations upon which he will base his legislative schedule for DOz some time late today.

LOWER BUS, TAXI RATES

The rates must be established under the law by September 15.

Boston's compulsory rate is likely to figure in a general decrease. Eight-five per cent. of commercial trucks and this figure in a decrease and 15 per cent. in an increase.

Public cars, which class includes taxicabs, automobile liveries and buses, may get a decrease.

Motorcycles are not likely to be affected to any great extent.

Garages and dealers, miscellane-

BULLETINS

Washington, Sept. 3 (INS)—A new and urgent warning for all Americans to leave war-torn Shanghai immediately was sounded today by the United States government. American warships were ordered to take out all Americans who can be persuaded to leave.

Shanghai, Sept. 4 (Saturday) (AP)—A new maelstrom of shell-fire and shrapnel engulfed international Shanghai early today, leading Frenc hauthorities to give to give blunt notice that they expected both sides to curb hostilities during evacuation of 850 French and American refugees.

Shanghai, Sept. 3 (AP)—China's armies surprised Japanese tonight with a smashing counter-offensive which shifted Shanghai warfare back to the city proper and placed in new jeopardy the lives of Americans and other foreigners.

The Chinese attack stalled Japan's long promised "big push" and forced a revision of Japanese strategy.

Chinese big guns and machine-gun nests spraised shells and bullets on Japanese warships and troop transports. Eight Japanese transports fled downstream.

PIMENTAL IS HELD AS BOY KILLER

The alleged confession of Joseph Pimental, 24-year-old Cambridge "strong boy," to the murder of Chester Harris, five, last October, today resulted in the following developments:

Police and Works Progress Administration workers searching the murder scene, where Pimental earlier had re-enacted the crime, found fragments of clothing said to have been worn by the Harris child the night he was slain.

Pimental appeared in Brighton District Court and pleaded not guilty to a charge of first degree murder.

Will Protect Children

State, city and county officials today joined with the Boston Evening American in a drive to co-ordinate law enforcement agencies throughout the state for the protection of children.

The drive was launched by the Boston Evening American today in an editorial which urged the "combination be brought into the open and that sex bureaus be established in every large city of the Commonwealth to cope solely with such crimes."

Shortly after the editorial was issued, District-Attorney William J. Foley of Suffolk County announced that he had called a meeting for tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in his office of representatives from county law enforcement agencies, probation and parole officials and members of the clergy who wish to attend.

Find New Boy Death Clues

Fragments of clothing said by police to have been worn by Chester Harris the night he was slain were found at the scene of the crime today after Joseph Pimental, accused killer of the boy, had re-enacted the slaying, police charge.

The most important discovery, according to police, were two buttons. One was a metal fastener said to come from the slain lad's overalls. The other was an imitation pearl button such as used in undergarments.

In addition, about 15 pieces of stained blue-lined cloth, like that of the overalls, and a tattered weather-worn remnant of imitation leather believed to have been part of Chester's overcoat, were unearthed by Works Progress Administration workers.

The searchers also found two pieces of wire similar to that used to bind the feet of the Harris boy when his body was thrust into a burlap bag and buried in a shallow grave.

SUSPECT IN BOY KILLING PLEADS 'NOT GUILTY'

were found. Pimental, 24-year-old Cambridge "strong boy," had appeared in Brighton district court and pleaded not guilty to a charge of first degree murder.

Judge Patrick J. Duane held the stolid, unshaven ex-convict without bail for a hearing September 16. The complaint against him was signed by Sergeant Joseph Maguire of Brighton police.

His plea came simultaneously with an announcement by District Attorney William J. Foley, of Suffolk County, that he would appear before the grand jury Tuesday and ask a murder indictment against Pimental.

He will be assisted by Frederick T. Doyle, of his staff, in the proceedings.

Harassed to a police officer, Pimental, while in court, maintained the same cold, phlegmatic air he had shown during most of the 24 hours of questioning which led to the police's confession of one of the most shocking crimes in the history of the commonwealth.

MUMBLES NOT GUILTY

Eyes downcast, he said nothing besides the mumbled plea

"Not guilty."

Earlier in the day, trembling and weary from his protracted questioning he had sobbed out in fear to police:

"Don't let them harm me."

He had been in the police court-room after he had led police over the route he illegally took the Harris boy before actually taking the body, causing the baby's death, according to police.

Police stationed a special detail at the door in the expectation that a hostile demonstration by outraged mothers and fathers.

It was said that during the questioning Pimental admitted offenses against more than 12 small girls in the Dudley street section of the city since his release from Concord reformatory. He could not remember, police said, the exact dates of crimes, but declared he had molested them during the Spring, Summer and Autumn months. Several officers were present during the questioning.

Pointing out each of the slowly moving cars in which the confessed killer sat manacled on his way to court, he insisted that the one where the body of Harris was found was the fifth car in the line, and not the second, as police maintained.

As machine approached the Boulevard overhead bridge behind which the body was placed, Pimental directed the driver to Western avenue and the Charles River driveway. Pimental was then heard to say:

"Is this the spot, Joe?"

The youth replied:

"Yes."

SEARCH FOR CLOTHING

He then showed the policemen where he found the body and the spot where he buried it about 50 feet from the grave.

Police left the expedition beyond the bridge at 2 o'clock, when they went on under direction of Sergeant J. Fallon.

Shortly after the arraignment Captain McGrath, directing the investigation, told a Boston Evening American reporter that the police were not through with the case, and would be heard from later.

BUTTONS WANTED

Captain McGrath pointed out that with each weather since the murder would destroy the cloth which did not deface the buttons, he asserted.

"I am convinced that Pimental has told the truth, and that he is the man who killed the Harris boy.

"We have not depended solely on his story, but we have today checked every movement he made.

"He has gone over the route with us and his story is highly circumstantial and convincing."

Pimental, who is employed as a boy in the soda water factory employing early today recognized the scene of the slaying, police said.

PRAYER AIDS BOY'S MOTHER

(Mrs. Edith Harris, mother of slain Chester Harris, revealed exclusively to the Boston Evening American today that she had a premonition that Chester's slayer would be apprehended a half-hour before being notified by reporters and police. Her story as told to a Boston Evening American reporter is as follows:)

By MRS. EDITH HARRIS
As Told to Edward W. Toomey

As I passed on a bus the billboards where poor little Chester's body was found six months ago, something inside of me told me to keep up my faith—I would hear something of Chester before long.

A voice kept repeating:

"Keep your faith, keep your faith," again and again. It would not stop. At first I thought it was my nerves, but now I know it was the voice of God telling me that Chester's death would be avenged.

Pondering over this as I walked from the bus stop to my new house, I was startled when little Charlie (Chester's twin) came running down the walk crying, "Mother, they've caught Chester's murderer."

I stood there motionless. I couldn't say a thing. Something inside of me snapped just as it did when they told me Chester's body was found.

But this was a different feeling. I seemed to be relieved. Everything that had seemed so hopeless, my prayers that Chester's slayer would be caught, had been answered.

The man that killed Chester isn't insane. He's worse than that, he's a fiend.

I always knew Chester's murderer would be captured. My husband and I have been praying every night that the killer would be caught. Almighty God always answers prayers.

He answered mine.

I believe in fervent prayer and now I am satisfied that we will soon know what really has happened to my poor little twin.

I don't blame Colonel Lindbergh for leaving the country. I would take my other children away if I could.

There are too many men of this sort at large. If this happened in Africa or some savage country we might make excuses—but not in a civilized country—not in America.

God and prayer have kept my husband and me alive during our trials. The words of the hymn "Grace, Grace, God's Grace, Greater Every Day" have kept ringing in my ears since last October.

Sleepless nights, false hopes to be shattered by reality, and countless other harrowing experiences will soon be over. Once again there will be peace with God and the world.

To Run Again

Rutland, Vt., Sept. 3 (AP)—United States Senator Ernest W. Gibson (R. of Brattleboro) had announced today that he will be a candidate for reelection.

Move to Protect Children

and then signed a confession stating that he had lured the golden-haired boy to the Western avenue, Brighton, lot where the child died, according to police.

POLICE RELIEVE STORY

Despite several minor flaws in his alleged confession, police believed that Pimental's story is essentially true.

Pimental was arraigned in Roxbury Wednesday after he allegedly attempted to restart a small girl. Pimental was arraigned in the Roxbury municipal court, and he remained two days of grilling with his confession to the Harris murder.

Led by Capt. James Daley in the Dudley street station, officers continued their investigation of the case in an effort to clear up several minor discrepancies in the story.

Although the original confession sets the date of the murder at dusk on a Saturday evening, a check of police records reveals that Chester disappeared on the night of October 30, 1936—a Friday.

Balancing this, however are records on file showing that Pimental was absent from his place of employment both Friday and Saturday, after his confession states he returned to the scene of the crime and removed the body—a clear grave according to authorities.

THOUGHT CHILD GIRL

He insisted throughout that he had met Chester in the little boy, whom he said he invented into going with him in the belief the child was a girl.

Chester, according to Pimental, died accidentally. He decided in his confession, he said:

"I didn't mean to kill him! I smothered him. The killing was an accident.

"I thought I was safe and that statement he held despite continued pleas that he tell the truth, police report.

His original confession came in a clear, unbreaking tone. He choked without slightest show of emotion, without slightest indication that he realized the seriousness of his crime—almost with complete calmness.

It came in answer to a charge question hurled at him by Captain McGrath after months of thorough examination, to the faint chance that it might have result.

It did.

"Where did you go after you killed that little boy in Cambridge?" he was asked.

Pimental replied with a quick refreshing frankness.

"I went home."

Then, realizing that he had slipped, he hurriedly erred:

"I thought you were talking about the matter of the little girl. I don't know nothing about the Harris boy."

But the grilling went on through Wednesday through Thursday. Yesterday he cracked.

Police told him:

"If we bring a woman in here who can identify you as being near the Harris boy's home on the day he disappeared, will you tell us the truth?"

TELLS "WHOLE STORY"

Then, wearily, the powerfully-built Pimental shoved his feet forward, leaned toward the officers and said:

"I know you have the whole story now. I know you have me. I might as well tell the truth. I'll tell you the whole story."

The alleged confession followed.

Mayor Mansfield today told the Boston Evening American:

"The Boston police department is deserving of great credit for its excellent work in solving this most vicious and depraved crime (the Harris case).

"Unfortunately, however, many similar crimes have never been solved. A more drastic and effective means should be devised immediately to keep close check on persons whose police records show them to be depraved.

OFFER CO-OPERATION

"In my opinion, the best suggestion advanced as a solution of this problem is that of the Boston Evening American that special police squads be created as sex bureaus for the sole purpose of protecting small boys and girls from these maniacs.

"I trust that District Attorney Foley and Police Commissioner Timilty will follow the suggestion of the Boston Evening American and place such bureaus in operation immediately.

"If there is anything that I can do, as mayor or as a private citizen, I will be glad to do it.

"I stand ready to cooperate with law enforcement authorities and the Boston Evening American in a drive to rid Boston of this menace."

TIMILTY PLANS ACTION

Police Commissioner Timilty, advocating the establishment of a sex bureau, said:

"I am not prepared to discuss the matter in its entirety at present. I have been provided with statistics of sex crimes in the City of Boston and in the Commonwealth.

"Even though the figures do not show it to be a big problem statistically, it is nevertheless a serious one.

"I believe some sort of organization, controlling and making a study of the situation, would be a great asset.

"It was only yesterday that I was talking to a group of people —before the Harris case broke— about the situation. I thought I should at least assign one man to carry on the work for this department at police headquarters. I had in mind Lieutenant Cornelius Ring of the detective bureau.

BARS PAROLE

"But I have made no arrangements. Perhaps a group conference with law enforcing officers of the commonwealth in a cooperative effort to see what we were going to do about it would be much more beneficial than a precaution taken by the Boston police department only.

"It's a social problem that calls for discussion by all people who are concerned with the problem.

"I think that if law enforcing authorities of the Commonwealth got together that some good results might come out of it.

"I might have more to say later after I've studied the Boston statistics on the subject."

District Court Chief Justice Robert Bushnell Chaffin, commenting on the Boston Evening American editorial said:

"I am fully in accord with the purpose of the editorial in the Boston Evening American. The American can count on my wholehearted support to the end that our children may be protected from the ravages of these kind of persons.

"The policy of this office has always been to prosecute to the limit such cases and to keep such people confined."

BISHOP OFFERS AID

District Attorney Bishop of Middlesex County, commenting on the Boston Evening American editorial said:

"I am fully in accord with the purpose of the editorial in the Boston Evening American. The American can count on my wholehearted support to the end that our children may be protected from the ravages of these kind of persons.

"The policy of this office has always been to prosecute to the limit such cases and to keep such people confined."

Alfonso arrived at the dukes' honeymoon retreat late yesterday for a short visit. The duke and his American-born duchess plan to leave for Hungary about the middle of the month.

MOTHER DOUBTS SON HARRIS BOY KILLER

"He's always been a good boy."

Mrs. Mary Pimental, middle-aged widow mother of Joseph Pimental held by police for the fiend slaying of little Chester Harris, repeats that again and again today as she sits at the kitchen of her home in Portland street, Cambridge.

"I don't believe he ever confessed. I don't believe he would do such a thing," she cries.

Comforted by neighbor women the stout, gray-haired mother, clothed in a cotton print dress, shrieks the story of her sorrow at the top of her lungs so that people passing in the street pause.

Of Portuguese birth, unable to speak good English, she appealed through her children for help for her eldest son, whom she believes is the victim of circumstances.

HEAD OF FAMILY

She cannot believe he would ever do any harm, much less the sort of crime of which he is accused.

"He always worked hard. He takes care of the family. Every morning he gets up at 6 o'clock to go to work. He comes home at night, he stays in the house," she explained.

She pointed to a colored picture of Joseph dressed as a dancer, with a backdrop of Spanish buildings. The picture was that of a handsome, smiling, clear-featured youth.

"Look at him," she said, and again her sobs overcame her. "He never gave me a moment's trouble. Would he hurt another mother's boy."

CRIES "MY POOR BOY"

"He has never been sick. He has never been treated for any ailments. He has always been all right.

"The man who did that, he was not my son. He was another man."

Again she appealed for help, again falling back into her native tongue, calling for her husband dead now four years, and repeating over and over:

"My poor boy, my poor boy."

"I will see him this afternoon, maybe," she said hopefully.

"He will explain everything and then it will be all right. It will be like it has always been."

Confession in Killing of Harris Boy

SUSPECT'S MOTHER CRIES HER SON IS INNOCENT

POLICE FURNISHED FULL CRIME DETAILS

PIMENTAL TALKS FREELY

Following is the substance of Joseph Pimental's confession to the murder of little Chester Harris. Its most revolting details omitted, it is published by the Boston Evening American in the nature of a shock warning to parents.

I was walking around the streets of Cambridge and I remember going by the Dwyer Stamp Works on Putnam avenue.

I saw this blond, curly-headed little boy. He was dressed in a pair of blue overalls and I think he had a jacket on. I am not sure of that, maybe he didn't.

I thought he was a little girl dressed in overalls like so many little girls about that age are.

I walked up to him and I asked him if he would like to take a walk with me.

I said I would tell him a nice story and he took my hand and we started to walk down to the parkway that runs near Magazine Beach.

We walked along the Parkway to Western avenue and across the bridge over the river and across the other parkway to the place where the billboard is.

He kept holding my hand all the way. He didn't seem to be frightened and I kept talking to him and he kept talking to me. I walked in behind the billboard, all the way around it and then I walked away up to the corner behind the board that faces Western avenue.

I urged him to sit down.

All of a sudden he became awfully still and he didn't say any more.

I took hold of his wrist and I felt of his pulse and I didn't feel it beating. He was still. I knew he was dead. I knew I had smothered him.

I left him laying where he was and I went across the street and I picked up some burlap bags and some wire and I went back to where I had left him laying.

I put his body in the bag and then I wrapped the wire around the bag.

I then decided to bury him so no one would find him. I had to dig the ground with my hands and with stones and I finally made a hole deep enough to bury him and cover him up with the loose dirt.

Then I hurried away from there and went home. I didn't say anything to anybody. I never have said a word about this to my brother or my sisters.

Last night I didn't sleep at all. I guess I was worried that someone would find the boy. I kept thinking I hadn't buried him deep enough.

The next day—that was Sunday—I went back to the place and I dug him up again to make the hole deeper. I wanted to be sure no one would find him. When I was sure the hole was deep enough I put him back.

I buried his clothes near the body. I guess about 50 feet away.

After I left on the second day I never went back there. I can take you over and show you where the clothes are.

I never struck the boy with anything. I guess he just smothered when I held him too close to me. I didn't mean to kill him."

JOSEPH PIMENTAL
Cowers Behind Bars

Torn by grief, Mrs. Mary Pimental of Portland street, Cambridge, pays no heed as Frank Radway, Boston Evening American staff photographer, takes her picture with her daughter, Alice (left), 13, and Helen (right), 15. "What can we do to save my boy?" she asks. "He couldn't have done what the papers say." Her sorrow is such that she can hardly speak and her sobs resound throughout the three-story house where she lives. "My son would never do this to another woman's boy!" she cries. The tears of this mother, of her two young daughters, show how the alleged confession of Pimental has wounded the lives of the innocent far more bitterly than his own, for while his sisters weep out their young hearts, Joseph Pimental remains emotionless.

FILM FOLK ATTEND SESSIONS

Radio Bad for Religion, Pastor Tells Institute

CARL MILLIKEN — DR. ALICE V. KELLIHER

Two prominent motion picture representatives attending the Institute of Human Relations at Williams College, Williamstown, are, left, Carl Milliken, secretary of the Motion Pictures Producers and Distributors of America (Will Hays' office), and Dr. Alice V. Kelliher, director of the Motion Pictures Commission of the Progressive Educational Association.

'Worship Must Be Public'

By WILLIAM MICHELFELDER

Williamstown, Sept. 3—Man's streamlined media of expression, the radio, was today the major problem before the Institute of Human Relations.

Four days already devoted to the press and motion picture, the institute, sponsored by the National Conference of Jews and Christians, considered the "evils in propaganda" through the medium of sound.

Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York and William E. Dodd, United States ambassador to Germany, were among the prominent speakers scheduled for the closing sessions tonight. Mr. Dodd, in a strange campus edifice which looks like the House of Parliament in London, is a Gothic structure on the outside.

More than 1,000 are expected to pack the hall tonight when Governor Lehman and Dodd discuss "public opinion and the American democratic way."

RADIO "IMPERFECT"

Meanwhile the radio program opened with a symposium address on the self-styled "fastest M. C. in the world," Fanny Brice and Baked Rolls. Miss Brice, who has a program of "the common, ordinary and bubbleless," along with 20 radio executives, was to discuss "the problem of nonsense and how to entertain" an audience.

"The radio transmits a picture imperfectly and sometimes not at all, the personality of the preacher. Broadcasting in most cases lessens its effect by half.

"I fear that preaching is losing its power because of the microphone. Religion is chiefly worship. Secret worship is impossible and desirable but, essentially, worship must be public."

NEED OF ACTION

Emphasizing that religion is a social function, Father Gannon declared the ministry and the theology had no business trying to alter themselves for the radio or the movie-hungry [illegible] that and by the Sunday supplement.

"Religion involves action, reaction, not only between God and man, but between man and his fellows. The radio setup is artificial and I think unfavorable to vital preaching."

Dr. Charles Macfarlane had something to say about women's power in American public affairs through the radio and magazines.

Mrs. Mandigo, a brisk, alert "public relations" [illegible], announced that [illegible] were attended by [illegible] women clergymen were admitted to [illegible] rites of the American Legion.

"If women wake up, I would like to see what would happen in this country in the next decade," she said.

"Women must learn to exert pressure group influence if they are to realize their ideals. They must learn to write letters to the President of the United States and to members of the Congress," she suggested that women's organizations throughout the country learn the value of free publicity and learn how to use it more effectively to present their own special problems.

ATTACKS PRESS

Last night Henry R. Luce, New York publisher, attacked modern trends in journalism, such as the tabloid and picture magazine.

"If the free press is to survive in this country, it must give the public more than it wants. It must educate them, get them away from mediocrity and sensationalism."

He sharply criticized the dictatorship of the press.

They destroyed journalism in Europe by corrupting the minds of the people with lies and frauds. Here in America the press is free—to pander to the people and by pandering to reduce them to their own enslavement."

Since the house was well acquainted with editors and publishers, the applause was restrained.

Martha Raye's New 'Party Wedding' Goes on Rocks

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor International News Service

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 3 (INS)—The three-months marriage of Martha Raye, the girl whose eccentric comedy, gay antics and lusty voice won her fame on the screen, and Hamilton "Buddy" Westmore, younger brother of the famous Westmores makeup artists, has hit the rocks.

This morning in Superior Court Miss Raye's attorney, Vincent A. Marvin, was scheduled to file suit for divorce on behalf of his client. He said he would charge extreme cruelty and incompatibility.

A lady can always change her mind, however, and it would not be surprising if Martha did. Because she and her husband had dinner together last night at the Tropics and went to the automobile races later.

Martha returned from a personal appearance tour Tuesday and went directly to the home of her husband, refusing to make a statement.

The marital break actually occurred while Martha was on tour and when Buddy went east to visit his brother.

Martha's elopement May 20 caused a furore in the Raye family. This writer was the first to break the news to her mother, who became hysterical when informed that her daughter, following a gay dinner party, had eloped to Las Vegas and married the world-leaping Westmore lad.

$150,000 Blaze In Portland, Conn.

Portland, Conn., Sept. 3—An investigation was under way today into the $150,000 fire that destroyed a large three-story wooden factory in the Connecticut River village.

The 20-year-old building, owned by the Rogers & Hubbard Company, manufacturers, was a complete loss. A nearby lumber yard was threatened. More than 100 firemen fought for more than an hour to subdue the blaze.

The Brighter Side

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and other rights reserved.)

If a fellow's teeth were yanked out in his early youth, and replaced with synthetic ivories, by the time he reached middle age he would think nothing of the matter.

But when he has arrived at the middle years, and those molar snatchers begin making inroads on his teeth, a feeling of great depression assails him.

The teeth may have long since ceased to be useful to him.

Damon Runyon on ornamental, but paining, with them is a pain in many ways than one. The chief pang is the thought that the end is a breaking up.

We think that dentists are not sufficiently sympathetic to this feeling. Dentists have little or no sentiment about original teeth.

They cannot seem to understand that a person who has acquired a certain teeth for years, is apt to have a soft spot in his heart for those teeth, and to feel a sense of great personal loss when they are taken from him.

DENTISTS LACK SYMPATHY

When a dentist views a defective tooth in a patient's mouth he does not pause to reflect upon what that tooth may have been through in the past.

Of the dentists' hands in which it may have been sunk down through the years. Of the cold, hard steel and heavy that may have pounded across that teeth in the patient's time. Of the many faces at which that tooth may have gleamed in days gone by.

A friend of ours once had a favorite tooth that was saved by dentistry on several occasions. He used to turn it in the hands of dentists meaning for his collar. When the time came that he had to go to a dentist about it he explained its history to the dentist and implored him to save the tooth at all hazards.

The dentist was not at all impressed by the story, as the dentist usually is not impressed by humming, spirits as he viewed the tooth, and finally he said, quite coldly, that it would have to come out.

OLD FRIENDS PART

So the tooth had to come out, and the dentist took it from the patient. The professor immediately just to spite the lack of compassion the dentist he attempted to retain possession, severing two life long friends.

Of course humming is not necessarily an expression of genius. It may be contemplative. But, as a rule, it indicates a carefree mind and a light heart, and as most dentists we have encountered generally start humming late-to-bed-and-early-to-rise tune when they yank a tooth you can draw your own conclusions.

We know a dentist who broke sixty cents to an astronomer in a wager that he could not go through the day without humming a single tune in public. One of his patients opened his mouth in the afternoon and inadvertently let out a few bars of "Home on the Range," and found the dentist turning handsprings.

The dentist explained that he was merely loosening up his fingers for the task at hand, but the patient says he felt that the dentist indulged a certain exhilaration in the handsprings not necessary to mere exercise.

NATURE'S MISTAKE

We think nature was all wrong when she got around to completing the human anatomy, and put in teeth. She should have made them all in one piece, and as lasting as the jawbone.

We appreciate that this would have been bad business for the dentistry world, and cut up the personal fortune of the good Dr. Romaine Gordon, on the isle of Jamaica, who pulled teeth to treatments, tooth, hammer, forceps, dentist and failing aches, but it would have mankind of much dramatic suffering and embarrassment.

When a man gets fairly well loaded up with phoney teeth, he is not the man he used to be in many ways, though he be endowed with the finest and costliest of the dental arts. His health may be better in every way, but his appetite for caramels diminishes and he is apt to be an economic loss to the manufacturers of chewing gum.

But this is not the worst of it. His approach to the other sex, however adept and sure it may have been when he had his teeth intact, is absolutely impaired, though we are willing to concede that the time a man needs false teeth, he ought to be beyond approaches. He might be breaking up a catchy epitaph.

FAREWELL TO ROMANCE

We know a chappy who, in his day, was a wonderful suppa at whispering sweet nothings into attentive ears. He was what you call a Lothario. A great guy with the gals. He was a sort of Robert Taylor among 'em in his time, handsome and debonaire, and a gun from the conversational gate.

The years went on, and one day he showed his check rack, and we say of a fellow who uses his teeth, though the biting was imperfectly repaired by a dental masterpiece.

Our Lothario has amazing confidence in his new gear, and resumed the whisperings immediately, but since the night his teeth fell out in an ardent moment, and broke a lady's knee cap, he has practically retired from the field.

He says he is not so regretful of his shared amours, but that he does miss corn on the cob.

CHINESE OPEN DRIVE, PERIL AMERICANS

Concession. Shrapnel burst over the foreign communities.

One projectile struck the roof of the Second United States Marine battalion barracks, but failed to explode.

A heavy artillery shell burst at the junction of Peking road and Shanghai's bund, in the International Settlement. Shrapnel burst about the U. S. cruiser Augusta.

Even greater danger loomed for the Augusta and other foreign warships. A Japanese naval spokesman announced Japanese ships would fire across the foreign naval contingent lying in the Whangpoo River to protect equipment of Chinese artillery positions.

Chinese gunners showed surprising improvement in marksmanship. Three second those direct hits on the Japanese consulate, seriously wounding three Japanese consular police and one Japanese newspaperman.

SPRAY U. S. WARSHIP

Many Japanese bluejackets on shore and on ship board were killed or wounded.

Two big shells plumped into Bubbling Well Road, one of them at the entrance of the world-famous Shanghai Race Club, in the heart of the city. It wounded a British volunteer and two Chinese. Another shell fell next to the Italian consulate.

A heavy artillery shell exploded in the International Settlement at the junction of Peking Road and Shanghai's Bund. Crossfire from Chinese and Japanese batteries sprayed about the U. S. cruiser Augusta.

Police estimated 11 persons were wounded, two seriously by the shell which struck the foreign business district. Settlement authorities closed the Bund and waterfront to traffic.

Shrapnel fell over a wide area, including the section containing the British consulate. At nightfall six Chinese were wounded by shrapnel bursting over the French concession.

Two Japanese destroyers took position tonight directly behind the Japanese flagship Idzumo, not far from the Augusta.

Chinese machine gun nests at Hongkew across the Whangpoo in Shanghai peppered the decks of Japanese warships which had massed after the transports had disembarked troops.

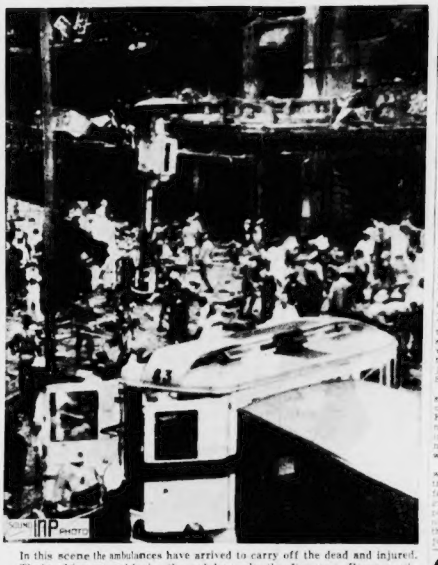
The Japanese were unable to reply effectively because the Augusta and other craft were in their range of fire.

By dusk six Japanese naval vessels had steamed up the Whangpoo to reinforce the barred mouth.

The United States supply ship Gold Star ran a gauntlet of shells late to evacuate about 100 wives of children of American officers on the ship sailed for Kobe, Japan. It was the first American refuge ship to leave since the departure of the Dollar liner President Hoover for Manila.

Japan moved today in the north to consolidate its control over the provinces of Hopeh and Chahar. At Peiping there was indications that the government of Japan-sponsored Manchukuo would be transferred to Peiping with Yoshiko Kuno Teh installed as head of the combined area.

Scattered among the shambles of a Shanghai department store, which had been bombed a few minutes before, injured and dying beg for aid as first rescue workers reach the scene. Hundreds were killed and more than a thousand persons, including two Americans, were wounded when the bomb, dropped from a Japanese plane, scored a direct hit on the Chinese-owned building.



In this scene the ambulances have arrived to carry off the dead and injured. The bombing occurred during the rush hour, shortly after noon. Rescue workers labored for hours to extricate many of the trapped victims. This is just one of the many disasters which have occurred in war-town Shanghai.

Bomb Turns Big Shanghai Store Into Vast Shambles

LEWIS ON RADIO TO LAUNCH HIS NEW PARTY

Washington, Sept. 3 (INS)—John L. Lewis, dominant leader of 4,000,000 industrial workmen, tonight will bid for the support of America's farmers.

In so doing, the CIO generalissimo will sound the call for a new national political party, although he definitely will not call it by that name—yet.

He will make little effort, however, to hide the existence of this as his real objective.

A nationwide radio hookup will carry Lewis' speech. So important does the CIO chief consider his message, he has sent out a formal statement outlining its general purposes.

Two specific groups will be singled out for attacks in the address—the forces who battled the CIO's sit-down and steel strikes, and those which have fought legislation supported by labor—particularly the wage and hour bill, bottled up in the House when Congress adjourned—and President Roosevelt's Supreme Court bill.

Leaving out at these forces, the swarthy Welshman who founded a union empire out of eight American Federation of Labor unions will name names and point to individual instances wherein he believes enemies of labor have struck at the working man.

Because of this opposition, Lewis will today present his appeal for the support of the American farmer. He will hold out to the farmers of the nation the promise of organization, and say that only in organization can they, the real owners of America, win justice.

MAJOR BATTLE NEAR MADRID

Hendaye, France-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 3 (AP)—Both the Spanish Government and its Insurgent foes laid claim to victory today in a major battle of the struggle for control of the Asturian front.

Together the contradictory reports filled in a graphic picture of combat centered on a huge circular battlefield, in a region of dried river beds and rocky hills and ravines, or midway between that Insurgent stronghold and Government-besieged Oviedo.

Insurgent reports reaching the French border said a coordinated attack by land and sea forces of Government lines in the Bilbao sector and that the Madrid-Valencia front had been put to diminished use.

Government reports from Valencia asserted, on the other hand, that the siege ring in Bilbao had been cut fast yesterday and that Government troops had smashed through dynamite their way inside the city, reaching the center of the town.

Pope Pius Faces New Fight for Health

Castle Gandolfo, Sept. 3 (INS)—With the approach of fall, Pope Pius XI today neared another critical period in health.

The coming change in weather, his physicians fear, may be extremely harmful to the frail 81-year-old pontiff whose recovery from complex ailments that held him bed-bound last winter astounded the world.

In recent days, oppressive heat weighed heavily upon His Holiness, even in the cloistered quiet of the papal beleaguered Zenith atop Mt. Vatican, the mercury hovered in the nineties, seldom going below 90.

On such days, the aged vicar of the Catholic world seemed to feel the responsibilities of his Church more than usual.

SITS IN SILENT PRAYER

Into moving silently in prayer, he would sit in the cool of the evening on a terrace overlooking the blue waters of Lake Albano, as the purple mists swirl in the ancient vulcano's flooded crater.

Other days recently, the days were very trying physically. With his arrival at Castle Gandolfo, he had resumed almost in toto his daily routine as head of the greatest religious organization in the world.

Except for a complete rest on Monday, he received visitors daily, and on Wednesdays and Saturdays devoted 20 minutes to receiving several thousand persons, weeks in special public audience. His voice has grown as weak in recent weeks that through a microphone and amplifier.

Within the past week even these audiences requiring but a fraction of his waning energy, have been greatly reduced. It was found the heat atmosphere of the Vatican chambers, where young men and women frequently fainted or broke into hysterical sobbing.

FEARS ASTHMA'S RETURN

Changes in the pontiff's schedule were made. Intimates of the papal retinue heard the Holy Father complain he was tired easily and found the heat "almost too much to bear."

Fear, however, according to authoritative Vatican sources, the Pontiff faced well while the heat was at its worst. He has remained moderately cool. The sharp temperature drop due to the approach of autumn may be the danger.

Autumn, on the contrary means a warm sun, but relatively cool evenings and nights. The extreme variations in temperature is a feared cause of asthma. Pius XI suffered from this malady for many years, and his entrance into the Vatican was the result of his asthma. Only after a return of his old pains, it is believed, will the Pope's treatment of the Popes limbs now consists merely in removing the bandages which envelop the legs, and in rubbing them before the Pontiff retires.

VETS DEMAND U. S. AVOID WAR

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP)—Veterans of Foreign Wars sent President Roosevelt today a copy of a resolution demanding neutrality legislation and withdrawal of American armed forces from foreign countries.

The resolution coincided with an urgent request to the President by a statement of United States foreign policy in keeping with the declarations of the resolution.

Adopted at the V. F. W. national convention, the resolution proposes that only enough troops be left on foreign soil to protect property owned by the United States government.

It said:

"We demand mandatory neutrality legislation."

The resolution proposed that American naval vessels be used to protect American citizens leaving for ports of call "only at their own peril and risk of time." After that has elapsed, only veterans and citizens engaged in official business may travel on ships flying the American flag.

Soviet Ship Sunk as 4 Nations Hunt 'Phantom' Sub

London, Sept. 3 (INS)—Sporting search by warships of four nations for the phantom submarine that prowled the Mediterranean, preying on neutral shipping in the Mediterranean waters, sinking of the 2,000-ton Soviet steamer Komsomol, was the high spot today.

Dispatches from Athens said the freighter was sunk by torpedo, by a submarine flying the Spanish Nationalist flag.

The sinking of the steamer was first reported to have been the Moskva, a vessel which appears in no official registry. It was believed here the original Moskva reports were erroneous, and that the Italian was the ship actually sunk.

In view of the continued depredations by mystery submarines terrorizing neutral shipping in the Mediterranean, the British admiralty decided to carry out the reinforcement there without further delay.

AUSTEN LAKE, America's foremost sports writer and columnist, every day in the Boston American.

LUNG HEROINE IMPROVES

Denver, Colo., Sept. 3 (INS)—Sadly today they made ready to bury Mrs. Dessie Wood Mulhall Outcalt, whose valiant battle against tuberculosis aroused a commonwealth to cause of cure.

But in trial and accomplished late today afternoon a few hours after the artificial respiration had been discontinued, Mrs. Outcalt began breathing by herself.

Physicians held vigils hopes that during the night she would continue improvement.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—Robert Hunt Lyman, 71, editor of the World Almanac until his retirement in 1906, died today of a heart attack. He had been ill two years. He was born in Huntington, Mass.

China War Boosts Sea Risk Rates

War risk insurance rates on cargoes carried by Japanese ships entering Chinese ports were increased 25 per cent because of war in China, officials of two Boston insurance companies revealed today.

Not only have the rates gone up but the warehouse-to-warehouse protection has been cut off and covered barges are being covered only while goods are aboard the vessels on which they are carried.

In Shanghai, several underwriters are refusing to insure in the Japanese section of the city, while rates have jumped considerably in the other localities.

AUTO RATE CUT DUE FOR BOSTON

nine classifications, which take in automobile liability and automobile trailers are likely to give the insurance department some trouble in setting a rate, the records show.

Fixing of the rate by Commissioner De Celles is being watched closely by insurance companies and by state officials as well as the insuring public.

Keen examinations from the State Insurance Department have been conducting an investigation in insurance company home offices throughout the United States reading all claims, increasing some, decreasing others and eliminating some altogether, it was learned today.

What the purpose of this investigation was Commissioner De Celles refused to disclose other than to say it was "checking the reserves."

De Celles said today:

"I am charged by the law to set rates which are adequate, just, reasonable and non-discriminatory and to fix and establish fair and reasonable classifications.

ONE CITY TO PROTEST

"I cannot outline the rates at this time because I have not determined them—they are now in process of being calculated. It has been brought to my attention that there is one city already framing a protest to the rates for that city, which I myself have not determined as yet."

Insurance company officials are watching closely to see what will be done by Commissioner De Celles with "reserves" and "expenses."

Now pending before the Supreme Court is the decision on a master's report which criticized De Celles for the formula on which he set the 1937 rates giving a general state decrease. These were attacked by the insurance companies.

The companies claimed "expenses" on their rates estimated on 15 per cent of premiums, but the published reports show in that there was an overestimation by him of outstanding and unsettled losses.

Previously the method was a two-year loss experience.

The companies claimed that the former standard was not fair in that there had been an increase in rates and accidents in the two years preceding 1937.

The "expense" item had to do with sums spent by the companies for various items—principally payments under the Social Security Act.

De Celles was asked:

"Do you intend to set the Massachusetts rates on the formula the companies want you to use and for which they took you to court?"

He answered:

"While I would appreciate the guidance of the Supreme Court, in the absence of any word from it I must proceed on a formula I believe to be adequate, just and fair to the insuring public as well as to the insurance companies."

TRUCK RATE PLAN SECRET

De Celles refused to state whether he would accept the new method of rating trucks set recently and on which there was a public hearing.

From state accident records it was determined today several large cities face increases on number what formula De Celles adopts.

However, the rural sections which have benefited by reductions for two years, look hopefully again to get the benefit.

Chelsea, the high rate Massachusetts accident city, looks in line for increase from the accident reports.

The nine Massachusetts zones, changed by De Celles from 21 in 1936, are being calculated today.

DISTASIO SPUT IN ADJOINING DEATH CELLS

For the first time in Massachusetts history, a father and son doomed torch slayers, today were death house occupants in State Prison at the same time.

Anthony DiStasio, 26, of East Boston, was moved from East Cambridge jail to the prison at 10:30 a. m. riding in an automobile and handcuffed to Sheriff Joseph M. McElroy of Middlesex county.

The condemned man was placed in Cell 1 of the death house, sign-ifying that he will remain there for 5 days of the week, beginning next Sunday.

During the prison noon hour, while other inmates were eating, the father, Frank DiStasio, 53-year-old Italian-born milk man, was walked across the prison yard, through the death chamber, passing the screened door past the cell holding his son and placed in Cell 2.

FIVE-WEEK RESPITE

The father, originally sentenced to die five weeks ago, was given a respite July 28 by Governor Hurley for five weeks to permit him, while in the death house, the Hingham torch-slaying of Daniel Hennessey, War Veteran, was being investigated.

On the motor ride to the prison, Anthony DiStasio was calm, according to sheriff McElroy. He did not know of what is facing me."

He was told the sheriff, he had requested his young wife, Mrs. Shirley DiStasio, not to visit him in the death house as he did not want to leave a painful impression in her mind. And he also thought, he said, that he would get a reprieve.

For his dinner, he ordered baked mackerel, mashed potatoes, string beans, sliced tomato salad and butter sliced canned pears, coffee and milk.

APPEARS CALM

Before entering the prison, the youthful DiStasio posed for newspaper photographers in the yard as he stood shackled to the sheriff. DiStasio showed a pallor but appeared undisturbed by his plight.

He had been in the death house cell just one week when his 53-year-old father arrived from the Cherry Hill section of the prison, where he had been confined. Fellow people removed him from the cell now occupied by his son.

The elder DiStasio, for noon dinner, had the regular prison fare but goes on the special death house diet beginning tomorrow. He, like the son, may order what he pleases.

Senators, Fruits Don't Can Selves

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

A Senator on vacation says the trouble with the farmer is that he stops growing anything and is living on canned goods.

Now, a Senator on vacation should know that those goods don't can themselves.

Neither do Senators on vacation. Senators and canned goods are subject to the direct vote of the people.

Before going into the can, the goods must be raised by the farmer. Then the farmer goes into the bag.

With due apology to the noble American Eagle and the sovereign state of Iowa, let us hope that the soil of all states will continue to raise two Senators.

Eight More Shot In Soviet 'Purge'

Moscow, Sept. 3 (AP)—Eight more persons convicted as Rightist enemies of the Soviet regime were shot today in Far East Province, and two others were sentenced to 10 years in prison.

They were reported to have confessed attempts to hamper development of collective farming in the Krasnovarsky district.

Town Sued By Boy for Rat Bite

Student Bitten in Test, Claims Rodent 'Wild'

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 3 (AP)—A white rat, described in the writ as "wild, vicious and ferocious," involved the town of Hamden today in a law suit.

Charles Hugh Hill, a sophomore at the Hamden High School, charged in the action filed in Superior Court that he was bitten by the rat. He asked $40,000 damages.

The papers in the suit charged that the student was bitten on a finger by the rats last November during an experiment in the school and that as a result Hill lost 45 per cent of his hearing in both ears.

"Said rat," the writ said, "on said day, to the knowledge of the defendants was even more wild, vicious and ferocious than similar animals ordinarily are due to the fact th the defendants had starved in for some time prior to that day."

The Hamden school district and the science teacher were named defendants in the suit with the town.

Fear N. E. Couple Perished in Boat Off Long Island

Adrift in a small vessel off Long Island, N. Y., a New England couple are believed to have perished, according to a teletype message from police at Bay Shore, N. Y., received here today by State police.

Their plight was revealed through a note in a whiskey bottle found on the beach at Southampton, L. I., the teletype said.

Scrawled on the paper found in the bottle were the following words:

"Mary and Tom, August 24, 1937. Radio has stopped. Our food is running low. We know there is no chance of our being saved. If you find this, put it in the 'Westerly Sun.'

"We died happy because we loved the sea."

Police believe the "Westerly Sun" referred to is the Westerly, R. I., newspaper of that name.

An investigation to determine the validity of the message was begun.

Farnum Studies Codman Quiz Data

After his last bitter clash with Mayor Mansfield, Attorney George R. Farnum, special prosecutor in the Codman Hill-George Robert White Fund investigation, today started assembling the fruits of the Finance Commission's five-month probe into a compact report.

Whether District Attorney William J. Foley will be asked to step into the case will depend upon the decision of the commission, after it has carefully reviewed the voluminous testimony taken during 12 weeks of turbulent hearings.

In the closing hours of the investigation Mayor Mansfield assailed the Finance Commission for spending more than $10,000, according to his claim, on an inquiry that revealed possible overcharges to the city amounting to $23.

TVA Power Sales To Net $4,300,000

Washington, Sept. 3 (AP)—Officials of the Tennessee Valley Authority said today contracts already signed for power sales to private industry eventually will bring a yearly income of $4,300,000. Four new industrial contracts recently were added to the two already in effect.

HERMAN BARNEY POLICE KILLER, IS SET FREE

Having served 18 years and one month for the slaying of Patrolman Charles E. Deininger in Chelsea, in 1918, Herman L. Barney was released by parole from State Prison last Wednesday, it was learned today.

No reason for keeping the release secret could be learned at the prison, where Barney had served an aggregate of a 15 to 20-year sentence for the slaying and a 3 to 5-year sentence for escaping in 1920 from the Charlestown jail.

According to parole board officials, Barney's case was mandatory under the law after he was imprisoned. This law ordered that a prisoner shall be released upon the expiration of the minimum sentence.

Barney's case, his two sentences totaling 20 years and his parole, is unique in the history of the state.

Originally the law was amended several times by parole boards, which reduced the minimum and maximum sentences.

Barney, who was 21 years old when he was sentenced to Charlestown, was 39 when he was released. He was married while in prison.

BAIL CUT DENIED

She was believed there yesterday that Judge W. Scott Allen of Newton refused a plea by his attorneys to reduce bail from $5,000 to $1,000 when he denied a petition for immediate trial.

Judges Allen granted a 10-day extension to District Attorney Elisha Brown on the ground that Patrolman Murphy, a principal state witness, was too ill to appear in court as yet.

A plea of temporary insanity will be offered in behalf of Frada, Assistant Attorney General Arsenault indicated.

The commissioner state police and the prosecuting attorneys attached to the district also removed yesterday from the record case in which Frada was charged with assault with intent to murder Patrolman Murphy, 25th.

"I don't think the bullet will be admissible as evidence, no matter what it shows," Arsenault asserted.

Simpson Waits Mentality Test

Lodged in separate prisons in adjacent Norfolk and Middlesex counties, the two key figures accused in the slaying of Patrolman Henry G. Bell of Newton today awaited the deliberate process of the law.

Edward P. Simpson, 39-year-old accused slayer of Bell and also charged with shooting Patrolman Lawrence E. Murphy, recovering from a neck operation, awaits an examination by state alienists.

Paramount puzzle in the legal prosecution of the case today appeared to be what role 17-year-old Frances Frada, held as an accessory, will play in the court battle.

UP TO GRAND JURY

District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex today announced he would make no specific recommendations against the girl to the grand jury.

"I'll give the jury all the evidence we have concerning her," he declared. "Then the jury can decide what charges to place against her."

Simpson has declared he will not identify the girl as being with him on the night Patrolman Bell was slain, should she be brought to trial as a defendant.

"I don't even know the girl," Attorney Harold Aranofsky, counsel for the defense, quoted Simpson as saying.

Accused by Patrolman Bell of his death bid of having removed his cap and thereby being identified, the 17-year-old Frada girl was arrested near a state of repose at East Cambridge jail today.

Bullet taken from neck of Edward P. Simpson, identified as from gun of wounded Patrolman Lawrence Murphy, is vital exhibit in Newton police shooting.

Roosevelt Fishes, Names Envoy

Associated Press Yacht Indian, Fort Pond Bay, L. I., Sept. 3 (NS)—President Roosevelt and his party, apparently bound on a cruise from Poughkeepsie this morning and dropped anchor in Fort Pond bay, near Montauk Point the tip of Long Island.

Shortly afterward a seaplane circled above the Antilope and the yacht Potomac and Postal Inspector Herbert Thurber took aboard an official mail pouch from Washington.

James Roosevelt, oldest son of the President, was also aboard the plane when it arrived, and it was generally said that the President was sending news of the recent appointment of Wade Hampton McGrath to be governor of Hawaii to Governor Poindexter, the new governor of the territory.

There were no day of mourning for shadow lakes and those old Methodist Priest with anchorage here overnight. Perfect weather prevailed and the cruise was uneventful.

Big Liner Brings 1122 Passengers

The Admiral Line Transatlantic liner Britannia docked Sunday at 1 p. m. to begin disembarking from East Boston pier 1.

Of the passenger list 120 passengers were here for Boston and 1,002 were going to New York. The Britannia was also said 2156 cases of canned salmon in bunch.

JUDGE FISHER, CURLEY'S FOE, QUITS BENCH

Judge Frederic A. Fisher of Lowell district court, storm center of the closing days of the Curley administration, today became the first member of the judiciary to resign under the provisions of the new uniform pension act.

The venerable Skycraft jurist, whose former Governor Curley sought vainly to remove from office by recommendations against the grand jury, tendered his resignation to Governor Hurley. His retirement is effective September 11 at midnight.

Governor Hurley announced he had accepted the resignation and transmitted a message to Judge Fisher, commending him for the service he has rendered the Commonwealth.

Under the new pension act a judge, effective September 1, judges who have reached the age of 70 may retire on three-quarters of their annual salaries. Thirty judges are eligible for retirement.

It was also learned today that the Governor's Council will take action Wednesday on the resignation of Judge William F. Baron of Newton district court, whose removal by the Governor's Council.

Judge Baron submitted his resignation several months ago, but the matter of acceptance was deferred by Governor Hurley to permit the latter to confer with the new appointee.

STEVENS CHRIS

The first test that Governor Curley might demand the removal of Judge Fisher came in October, after the judge had sentenced three men to the Reformatory for Women for receiving a number of girls.

While counsel and officers of the court were present, Judge Fisher informed a sex-hungry Lowell attorney, who was then Governor Curley's secretary, that he would be glad to appoint him.

The girls were subsequently pardoned by authority of the Governor's Council.

Affairs reached a new climax when Judge Fisher imposed a sentence of one year on a woman convicted of drunkenness as a first offender.

2 JUDGES DEFIED CURLEY

Governor Curley moved immediately for Judge Fisher's retirement, but the latter refused to withdraw. Judge Baron, 71 years old, is retiring on the ground that judges must retire at 70 years of age, and Governor Curley sought to compel him to remain.

Both judges refused to appear before the governor's council, and Governor Curley refused to remove them on the ground.

Public opinion raised in Judge Fisher's behalf and a petition by his friends was signed by every lawyer in Lowell and arrangements were made to fight removal proceedings.

WITHDRAW COURT ACTIONS

In the face of their developments Governor Curley finally abandoned his campaign to oust the two judges. Whereupon both jurists withdrew their actions which had been conducted against the Governor's Council.

On December 11, one day after the governor had dropped his ouster action, Judge Fisher found himself in the unique position of being the only judge in the court when he arrived in Lowell.

A year after [illegible] Governor Curley [illegible] Congratulations — the Lowell Bar.

Hypnotize Your Tummy Ache Away

Nottingham, Eng., Sept. 3 (AP)—A medical speaker before the British Association for the Advancement of Science today suggested a mild form of hypnotism to relieve tummy aches and infringe dyspepsia.

Dr. William Brown, director of the Institute of Experimental Psychology at Oxford, said persons who have indigestion and those who suffer from ulcer of the stomach get this kind of hypnotic relief by lying down and relaxing, then closing their eyes and thinking of something that everything is all right.

Soon as they start thinking that way, will power will take care of the rest, he explained.

Bank Employe Held for Theft

Pleading not guilty to a complaint charging embezzlement of $1000 from the First National Bank of Boston, where he was employed as examiner, Carl Hammond, of Needham, was held in $1000 for hearing September 10 by U. S. Commissioner Harry N. Gutterman today.

According to the complaint the alleged embezzlement took place in August.

2 Servants Fight for Million

Goshen, N. Y., Sept. 3 (AP)—A maid and a butler stepped out of their servants' roles and settled down today in possession of the showplace Tuxedo Park estate of their late mistress, Mrs. Julia Marshall Foster, ready to fight for the right to divide her $1,000,000 fortune.

Although the determined pair, Olivia Olsen and William Lowe, were definitely "at home," they refused to see callers. Police at the gates kept out visitors, telephone calls brought only an anonymous voice to say "nobody home." And the fashionable Tuxedo Park colony gasped in amazement.

Chief fighting point in the servants' claim to all the Foster wealth instead of the $35,000 bequeathed to each in a will filed Saturday, was another will, purportedly in Mrs. Foster's own handwriting which they offered for probate yesterday before Surrogate Charles E. Taylor.

The servants document was dated September 10, 1935, on a Tuxedo paper bore a July 26, 1902, date, and said:

"I leave all my real and personal property to be equally divided between Olivia Olsen, my maid, and William Lowe, my butler, because of their faithful service. I wish them a happy life."

Miss Olsen had been in Mrs. Foster's employ 29 years; Lowe had served her 17 years.

Lowe, who had been living with his wife and daughter, who are now in England to remain over the war age, today moved into the mansion. The previous will named Frederic Foster de Rham of Lincoln Place, a nephew, as residuary legatee and awarded substantial bequests.

Joy Street Police Station Reopens

[illegible] known as the Joy Street station, reopened today for the first time since 1931. It is in the West End district of [illegible] of its own once more.

The impending [illegible] took place with rollcall by Captain William D. Donovan.

ACCIDENT JINX DOGS OPENING OF AIR MEET

Municipal Airport, Cleveland, O., Sept. 3 (INS)—The injury jinx which already has taken one life and seen another crackup clung tenaciously to the National Air races here today, as the first official competition, a spot parachute jumping contest, wound up with two participants injured.

Joe Thorne of New York, president of the Parachute Jumpers Association, sustained a broken ankle and Tot Dyer, well known feminine aviatrix, we badly shaken in their attempts to land in the center of a 100-foot white circle painted on the ground as the contest's target for the jumpers.

Their brilliance dimmed by the tragic end of Lee Miles, popular 37-year-old Fort Worth (Tex.) pilot, the air races opened with the flying of the Hendrix Trophy Los Angeles-to-Cleveland speed dash.

Miles, one-time flying instructor and personal pilot for Ann Harding, the moving picture actress, plunged to his death shortly after noon yesterday as disappointed at earlier performances of six other girls racers, he qualifying trials he lifted the speedy ship into the air again for a tuning hop.

Nothing damned by this catastrophe, others pressed into the airport early to be in on the fetes of the finale.

In the late afternoon seven mid-dazzling women fliers were due in the 200-mile Amelia Earhart Trophy race. They are Edith Bernard Lincoln, Jerrie Bell Browning, Kansas City; Edna Gardner, New Orleans; Annette Gibson, Garden City, N. Y.; Ruth O'Donnell, Long Beach, Cal.; Phoebe Monroe Omlie, Memphis; and Jacqueline Cochran.

15 Missing in Wreck of Florida Steamer

Panama City, Fla., Sept. 3 (AP)—The story of a heroic 25-hour swim through choppy seas with the word of a steamship wreck was unfolded today while coast guardsmen guessed, with deadening hope, a search for 15 missing members of the crew of the freighter Tarpon.

The mind unleashed by the ex-ploit of Ashley Baker, 25-year-old Mobile, Ala., oiler, resulted in the rescue of nine survivors of the crew of 29.

Two Negroes drifted ashore on floating wreckage. The rescuers recovered two bodies, including that of Captain W. G. Barrow, veteran skipper who was making his 175th trip with the Tarpon when it foundered early Wednesday, 30 miles off East Pass in the Gulf of Mexico.

Baker said the Tarpon had run into heavy weather last Tuesday and the freighter had been adrift two seas for hours before the [illegible] failed. He donned a life preserver and fought his way to the deck as the ship listed to the pounding of the waves, then:

"She turned over and we grabbed whatever we could. The rigging caught me and carried me and Chief Engineer William C. McKnight about four feet under. I fought my way up and grabbed a plank.

GEORGIA HEAD SENDS HURLEY SYMPATHY

illness. May the spirit of an all wise Creator serve to comfort you in your troubles."

HURLEY WIRES THANKS

"Please accept my sincere thanks for your kind message and thoughtfulness concerning my daughter Sally."

What state officials declined to say officially, however, was the sum of his outlook, as indicated by the following skeptical letter to Governor Rivers:

"We would rather have Georgia convicts here than Georgia governor."

Meanwhile, when along the Atlantic seaboard had failed to receive a favorable nod of Rivers' ruling, Willie Hayes-old Negro pursued by Rivers on murderous chain gang charge, had parole term in Massachusetts.

He was next interested since

[illegible] Georgia chain gang escapee, the attractive eight-[illegible] Cape Cod Chamber of Commerce, reportedly declared.

Meanwhile, Cunningham today [illegible] Governor Rivers as [illegible] a big baby. Cunningham said he was anxious to meet Willie. He said:

"I want to tell him to behave himself, and I want to tell him if he does he won't have to worry about any of the folks in Massachusetts."

"Cape Cod is no place for convicts. It never has been and we won't start any parole resort at this late date. However, if Governor Rivers himself would like to visit Cape Cod he will be very welcome. I have wired him to this effect."

Weeks statement, followed a reported announcement by Rivers that six convicts—four life-term murders and two burglars—have expressed their willingness to return in Massachusetts if allowed freedom.

In Hyannis a town crier today cried "asinine to the requests of the chain gang pleaders in Georgia."

William F. Gilman the town crier and chairman of the executive committee of town criers, said that he was sure that a man who would be elected governor "could stoop to such ludicrous conduct."

"HURLEY DAY"

Governor Rivers also announced he was seriously considering designating July 27, the day Governor Hurley refused to extradite James Cunningham, escaped Georgia convict, as "Hurley Day."

On this auspicious anniversary Rivers said, fish cakes and baked beans would be served chain gangers and those seeking paroles might offer their applications on that date.

Representative Joseph L. Murphy of Dorchester entered the battle with a castigation (by letter) of Governor Rivers for "passing the buck" in blaming Governor Hurley for the wave of chain gang escapes in the Southern state.

While Murphy's letter was en route it was announced that seven more convicts had escaped at Homer, Ga., and carried two guards away in a stolen truck. It was believed they were hiding in a swamp and a posse was closing in.

Bill Terry's Salary Reward to Victor | New Farm System Joe DiMaggio

By JACK CONWAY

BILL TERRY, who has signed a new contract with the Giants which will pay him $42,500 a year for the next five years, always maintained that a winning ball club was more important than a good disposition.

"If I keep the Giants up in the pennant race I shall continue to get a good salary and occupy a prominent position in baseball," said Terry. "The fact many people don't like me won't make any difference. In baseball, as in other sports, the payoff goes to the winner."

Newsmen failed to get enthusiastic over Terry during his early days with the Giants. They refused to show them much consideration, and [illegible] to take a shot on him by comparing him unfavorably [illegible] John McGraw, his predecessor as manager of the Giants.

Terry took this criticism with a scowl, but he did not permit it to interfere with his own playing or with his operation of the Giants.

I always considered Terry a fine type of competitive athlete. He had what it takes in crucial games. He also had the ability to inspire his players.

Since Terry has become a bench manager, he has retained his old fire. Baseball players respect his judgment and they know he appreciates it when they play a good game.

Miss Marsters and Bill Terry

"How do you do, Mr. Terry?" said Miss Marsters.

Terry removed his hat and stood up and faced Miss Marsters.

The photographer snapped the picture, and when Terry realized it was a newspaper girl who had addressed him he fled.

The picture and Miss Marsters' story were later published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and also in leading Hearst newspapers throughout the United States.

Terry later became more tolerant of newspaper people. In fact, on the suggestion of the management of the Giants, Bill tossed an elaborate dinner to sports writers in New York. He insisted that the writers drink champagne, and he forgot to scowl when they offered a toast to his success as boss of the Giants.

"I don't dislike newsmen," Terry told his guests. "I just don't like to be bothered answering questions about the batting averages of different players and the pitching of my stars during my off time. I like to talk baseball with smart baseball people. In this way I can improve my own knowledge of the game, but I am opposed to answering silly questions fired at me by reporters."

RANGER Invited to ENGLAND

VANDERBILT MAY ACCEPT

Ranger's fifth straight victory in the final of a series of five races for a trophy offered by Marblehead was overshadowed today by the report that Harold S. Vanderbilt's famous America's Cup defender may race in British waters next year.

Invitations, it was said, were issued Vanderbilt, Chandler Hovey, owner of Rainbow, and Gerard B. Lambert, owner of Yankee, by T. O. M. Sopwith, whose Endeavour II failed in attempts to lift the America's Cup to take their craft abroad for the 1938 British racing season.

Neither Vanderbilt or the other two American Class J boat owners would comment.

One possible explanation of Vanderbilt's reluctance was seen in the fact that Ranger, entered in English races, would have to allow time to all competitors.

Ranger's victory in the final of the town of Marblehead races marked the end of the greatest boat racing season in American waters and saw the departure of Endeavour II and Endeavour I for an unannounced destination where they each will refit for transatlantic passage to England. The American boats too, were off for winter quarters.

Financial Muddle Faced Mellon in Treasury Post

Here is the sixth chapter of a graphic life story of Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, one-time ambassador to the Court of St. James, and one of the richest men in the world.

George Rothwell Brown, noted columnist for the Hearst newspapers, enjoyed a close personal acquaintance with Mr. Mellon that began when the latter entered President Harding's cabinet in 1921.

CHAPTER SIX

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

(Copyright, 1937, by Boston Evening American)

When Andrew W. Mellon became Secretary of the Treasury on March 4, 1921, three stupendous financial facts stared him in the face.

The government's expenditure for that fiscal year amounted to $5,538,209,000.

In any sane and well-managed economy that sort of thing could not go on.

The public debt—for the year ending June 30, 1920—was $24,297,818,412, and was also a fraction over 24 billions for the year 1921. It must be reduced.

The many billions of war debts owed by the Allies to the United States plus the many millions borrowed after the Armistice were in a deplorable condition, and must be refunded.

There were many other things to face, and the financial genius of a wizard like Mr. Mellon, but these were outstanding.

Mr. Mellon addressed himself to the solution of the nation's pressing money problems with all the concentrated ability he had used in building up the world's most extensive industrial empire.

WORKED LONG HOURS

His salary was $12,000 a year—just enough enough to pay the rent and light bills of his Massachusetts avenue apartment.

It is said that it must be conceded that he rendered a service to the American people that would have been worth at any price he might have named.

The true public servant does not make any attempt to duly estimate of money. Mr. Mellon was to prove himself to be one of the most delightful public servants Washington had ever known.

He had no schedule of work, no regular time for quitting. He was generally still at his labors in the Treasury every evening a good two hours after the usual hour had gone home and called it a day.

It has been said of Mr. Mellon that for years he had scurried to his home for the day taking the task home with him—unfinished.

This was probably not true of him in Washington. Certainly it was not true of him in his Washington years.

Mr. Mellon possessed the power of concentration to an extraordinary degree.

KNEW HOW TO RELAX

Whether his problem was great or small he gave it to the full force of his mental faculties. He thought things through and when he reached that conclusion he was finished. The problem was solved. He could relax and think of other things. But if he had a faculty of intense concentration, he also knew how to relax. Once he had made a decision, that was the end of it. He would pass it from his mind and would never worry about the matter again.

During the period of his stay in Washington in the Cabinet of Mr. Harding and in the Cabinets of Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover, he gave all of his energies were devoted to the task in hand.

In the dusk of night in the winter time when it grew dark early, he would leave his office for the night. In no other land but America could so rich a man have enjoyed the perfect freedom from all molestation of the humblest citizen.

His evenings he nearly always spent at home. His reading embraced history and biography. He occasionally amused himself with a light novel or detective story, but not often. Although Mr. Mellon was himself essentially a poet highly gifted in the imaginative quality, he was not fond of poetry.

GREAT ART LOVER

His went to bed early, and slept well. He entertained in about the normal manner of members of the Cabinet, but not more so. He gave the customary number of Cabinet dinners, and no more. They were invariably marked by the great, yet simple, hospitality for which he is quite digitally.

His apartment, which occupied the second floor of one of the many palatial homes in Washington, was far from being magnificent. There were many private homes in Washington which far excelled it.

But it was pretty quickly borne in on the visitor that apartment was Mr. Mellon's home and he is seen there to the best advantage. Despite the fact that he was accustomed to associating with artists and others in Washington, possessed of considerable culture, he was impressed with these immortal works of art. They may have had an enormous value, but he cared little.

He was not impressed by the fact that the paintings quickly came to realize that upon the walls of Mr. Mellon's home were to be seen many of the world's masterpieces.

Mr. Mellon's home was to be seen to advantage only because the paintings that adorned the walls were in Washington, possessed considerable charm and commanded with these immortal works of art. They may have had an enormous value, but he cared little.

PLEADS FOR ECONOMY

In business, Mr. Mellon acted with his usual promptness. Five days after he had been sworn in to the banking institutions of the country, as the first official act, a review of the financial situation. He said:

"These figures as to the public debt and the current operations of the Treasury show that the country's finances are sound, but that the situation calls for the utmost economy . . . the people generally must become more interested in saving the government's money than in spending. A thorough going national budget system must be established, and the government's expenses brought into relation with its income."

That was a homely statement of the unforgettable truth that at the time it was in accord with the American tradition and with the sacred desires of the American people.

Naturally, there was a protest and there was a demand for relief. The people to whom the payment of taxes was still strong in their memories began to believe that the best relief to them would be to have the government spending much less money, and the government would exert itself to reduce the taxes now levied.

PUTS NATION ON BUDGET

Within a few months on June 30, 1921, a budget system in America was established for the first time. Mr. Mellon had deeply impressed upon Congress the necessity of it. Charles G. Dawes, the Chicago banker, who had been considered by Mr. Harding as his secretary of the treasury, became the first director of the budget, under Secretary Mellon.

As a consequence expenditures of $5,538,209,000 for the year ending June 30, 1921, were cut to $3,796,303,000 for the fiscal year 1922.

Each year thereafter Mr. Mellon, as head of the treasury, kept expenditures under $4,000,000,000.

Mr. Mellon next turned his attention to that devouring monster, a public debt of nearly $24,000,000,000, as compared with the all-time national debt peak up to that time —of $25,482,604,449, in 1919.

Mr. Mellon announced that he would devote his activities on a straight investment basis.

During the fiscal year 1922—his first in office—Mr. Mellon reduced the national debt by just a shade under 1,000 millions of dollars.

Meanwhile he had effected a considerable part of the early maturing debt into long-term maturities at a lower rate of interest.

URGED LOWER TAXES

This policy of lowered taxes to stimulate private business, he repeatedly urged upon Congress. He was largely instrumental in bringing about four major tax reductions.

Taxes were reduced under the Revenue Act of 1921 by $663,000,000.

Three years later, another reduction was made by the Revenue Act of 1924.

Two years thereafter another tax reduction reduced the burden by $160,000,000.

In 1928, $222,000,000 was taken off the load of taxation. The whole tax system was revised and improved, and the Board of Tax Appeals was established.

Mr. Mellon theorized that more revenue would be obtained by reducing taxes was abundantly demonstrated. There was just at first no apparent response to applause his wisdom.

Each Treasury statement showed a deficit, the smallest of which had stood at $23,976,250,000 when the new administration office was established.

Mr. Mellon lowered it to $22,963,080,000 in 1922. The following year it was reduced to $14,677,774,000. By 1924 it was down to $11,251,120,427.

SEES BENEFIT TO ALL

In 1925 Mr. Mellon still further reduced the public debt to $20,516,193,449, and in 1926 to $19,643,482,023.

The drop then became more pronounced until the low of $16,185,309,300 was reached in 1930 the first year after the 1929 bad business slump.

Mr. Mellon in 1925 explained that the public debt was being reduced because it really was money belonging to the people which was being used to reduce their own taxes.

"The Treasury Department," he said, "is merely the agent of the American people. $5,000,000,000 and this sum has gone into land, labor, capital and industrial and other investments.

"Far from hurting the country, the large reduction of debt is a great benefit to all those who need capital. This country is today exceedingly prosperous. We can afford to pay off its debts without undue burden upon its taxpayers. In fact, it always has been prompt extinguishment of its war debts. It is ready for the next war when it comes. The time to repair your roof is in good weather, not when it is raining. The time to pay off debts is when you can."

That stung up Mr. Mellon's fiscal philosophy. Upon which it was based is the fairness always of taxing income from wages, salaries and profits rather than income from investments.

HOW COME, JOHN?

McCarthy Of Giants Turns Slugger Overnight

By the Associated Press

Social note: Lady Luck is that way about Bill Terry again.

The romance that waxed warm just about this time last season, when the National League pennant race was in the early part of the current campaign, is blooming again.

Everything is breaking right for the Colonel from Memphis and his New York Giants.

His pitchers have started to click again. His attack is timely if not murderous, and his nearest rivals for the National League pennant are falling apart with all the consistency of a layer cake hit with a sledge hammer.

And now, as though that weren't enough, the weakest weapon in his defense, young Johnny McCarthy, is beginning to find the range, and his perennial foudists the Flatbush nine at Brooklyn, are doing their level best to kick the Giants' upstairs.

What with this and that the Terry terriers were a fat game in front in the National League pennant parade today. Their 5-4 win over the Cardinals yesterday, coupled with the Dodgers' 4-3 decision from the second place Cubs, left the championship chase in this form:

	Won	Lost	Pct	Play
Giants	73	47	.608	34
Cubs	73	49	.598	32

Only a few days ago, the experts were referring to McCarthy as the "prime rookie" member of the Giants' cast.

He was given a chance at first base earlier in the year, was benched in favor of the ailing but heavier hitting Sandino Leslie and had to be recalled several days ago when Leslie returned to the hospital. But, and Johnny is marching home with his hat.

He was the No. 1 walloper yesterday in the 10-inning win over the Cards.

He whacked two homers to make up for a fielding collapse on the part of the New Yorkers and kept the Giants in the game long enough for Mel Ott's 20th round tripper and a trio of assorted hows in the 10th to put the Giants on the right side of the ledger.

At the same time Van Mungo, Dazzy Vance, Whitlow Wyatt, Freddie Fitzsimmons, Tex Carleton and Terry's chaser, Curly Ogden, the Dodgers off to the league that has been dominated now with the Giants in 24 added and abetted the New York cause.

Of course, the Cubs continued their mad homestead as they went down for the second straight day before the Dodgers, but their 11-inning walloping at the hands of the Brooklyns made it all the more conclusive that "things ain't what they used to be" on the banks of the Gowanus.

Meantime the Yankees and their simple pals into yeah Bob Feller and the alleged Murderers' Row took a terrible licking around New York. Pitcher Johnny Murphy, pitcher, fanned a dozen and allowed five hits as he buried the Indians 4-2 at Cleveland. Pitcher Maggie 39th homered.

Hank Greenberg poked two homers and Pitcher Tiger Tyler held the Senators, 9-8, in ten innings to vit the Yanks lead to ten games.

Pitcher Lefty Gomez held the Red Sox twice, 4-2 and 10-8, and the Athletics trimmed the browns, 4-3 and 11-3. Pitcher Chubby with the Dr the bases loaded.

The Pirates' five-run rally in the ninth gave the Phillies, 11-8. The Bees and Reds were idle.

Mrs. Wingard Wins Canadian Swim

Toronto, Sept. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Leone Right Wingard is the second American to walk off with the prize money for a Marathon swim held at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Mrs. Wingard followed the example of Frank Pritchard of Buffalo when she took the women's three-mile swim yesterday and first money of $750. Mrs. Wingard, who hails from Homestead Pa., won the Cleveland Exposition's swim recently.

May Looney, Warren, O., was second to Mrs. Wingard and Susan Robertson, Sea Bright, N. J., third. Miss Robertson won the event last year.

Guldahl, Mangrum Tied at Hershey

Hershey, Pa., Sept. 3 (AP)—Shattering par by six strokes to equal the course record of 67 established by Tony Manero in 1936, national open champion, and Ray Mangrum, of Dayton, Ohio, tied for the lead at the end of the first round in the 72-hole $5000 Hershey open tournament.

Henry Picard, of Hershey, without a practice round, fired 33-34—67 and was third with a three-under-par 70. Tied for fourth were Francis Ouimet, of Boston; C. Amateur Charles Schneider and Sam Byrd, of Philadelphia, and Ben Hogan, Forth Worth, Texas, with 71s.

FREIGHT Rate Increase LIKELY

MOUNTING RAIL COSTS CAUSE

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright by Boston Evening American

New York, Sept. 3—With railroad operating costs on the uptrend, railroad executives think that an increase in freight rates is indicated. There is a difference of opinion as to what should be done with passenger rates. Sentiment is divided as to whether existing low rates are producing an optimum of passenger revenues.

L. W. Baldwin, chief executive of the Missouri Pacific Lines, who favors existing passenger rates, when asked whether the railroads are receiving more or less net passenger revenue from existing low rates than they would get from a higher rate structure, said me:

"I believe they are receiving more."

As for freight rates, Mr. Baldwin declared:

"Public understanding of the railroads' problems is growing and may in time develop a public sentiment strong enough to bring about a national transportation policy that will be fair to the railroads and to all forms of transportation.

"The Federal government can help by stopping further passage of restrictive and confusing and may in time develop legislation affecting the railroads, also by adopting a more sympathetic attitude with respect to freight rate increases."

Of more significance to the railroads in general, I believe, For the Missouri Pacific, we think the prospects are fine."

I then asked whether in the event of a substantial increase in railroad wages the railroads would recommend in the case of manpower.

Mr. Baldwin replied:

"Possibly on some railroads."

Mr. Baldwin indicated that if wage rates were increased he would be able there would be more purchases of new cars, freight and passenger cars, and locomotives.

I submitted the same questions to the president of an important eastern road.

His views follow:

"It is my opinion that the railroads would have a greater net passenger revenue with a slight increase in the present rate per mile in coaches.

"We expect an increase in freight traffic for the remainder of the year of approximately 10 per cent for the railroads in general and for our own line also.

"An increase in wage rates will have to be met by many lines through a reduction in time worked.

"The federal government can apply the same measure of regulation to all kinds of transportation as is applied to the railroads. Congress should not enact such proposed legislation as the 'hour' train limit bill which would serve no purpose except to interfere with efficient operation of the railroads.

"Queried as to whether the railroads had bought any large amount of equipment and maintenance needs, the eastern president said, 'If we had sufficient funds for the purchase of the railroads collected.

"As far as our own line is concerned, we think there is no deferred maintenance of way or of equipment based on present traffic requirements.

Wheat Prices in Early Advance

Chicago, Sept. 3 (AP) — Wheat prices advanced slowly early today after an irregular start. A commercial estimate of a 100,000,000 increase in Australian wheat production compared with last season failed to check bullish factors of higher Liverpool prices and unsettling international political news from Europe and Asia encouraged buyers.

Opening ¼ lower to ¼ higher, September 1.05¾-06, December 1.07¾-¾, wheat later rose well around. Corn started ¼-½ up. September 96, December 83¾-¾, and then steadied.

Wholesale Prices Down 0.9 P. C.

A decline of 0.9 per cent in the bureau of labor statistics' wholesale commodity price index for the week ended August 28 has been reported.

The sharp decrease was attributed to declines in wholesale prices of farm products and foods.

Berlin Kiwanis Club Favors Brown Plan

Berlin, N. H., Sept. 3—The Kiwanis Club of Berlin added its support to the growing demand for co-operation among business organizations for early completion of the reorganization of Brown Company, upon which more than 20,000 people in this city are dependent for a livelihood.

The action, passed unanimously by the group, many of whose members are bondholders and preferred stockholders, the club said.

"The progress of the pulp and paper industry, whose annual payroll totals into many millions of dollars, has been a chief factor in New England's emergence from the depression.

"For 85 years Brown Company, one of the leading pulp and paper manufacturers in this area, helped all New England to grow and prosper. The return to normal operations of the company is vitally essential to the welfare of Berlin and New Hampshire."

The local civic organization urged "all bondholders and stockholders to speedily accept the reorganization plan." R. J. Garrett, president of the club, announced that copies of the resolution were being forwarded to 1500 Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States, asking them to co-operate in urging acceptance of the plan by security holders among their membership.

The Kiwanis Club is the fourth local group to voluntarily offer its support to Brown Company in its reorganization effort.

Trading in London Again Restricted

London, Sept. 3 (INS)—Trading on the London stock market, with the exception of international issues was restricted again today by the approach of the end-of-account period, and the uncertainty of the Spanish-Japanese and Mediterranean situations.

International issues were active and showed a general advance under the leadership of steels U. S. Steel was at 204 a decline International Nickel 56¾, decline Chrysler 109¾, decline Shell Oil 23 1-2 and Standard of New Jersey 53 1-2 and Franklin Tractions 6¾ and 21 1-16 dollars.

The general market trend was quiet and firm. Chinese and Japanese bonds were slightly higher Rubber shares and Canadian Funds were dull and irregular.

Carloadings Up 6126 Cars

Washington, Sept. 3 (INS)—Loadings of revenue freight for the week ended August 28 totaled 787,373 cars, an increase of 6126 cars above preceding week, and an increase of 35,276 cars above corresponding week last year, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

Ore Movement Sets Record

Movement of iron ore from upper lake ports set record of 10,511,381 tons in August as operations sought to catch up with demand. Lake ports are closed for the winter months when the season's ore movement usually totals around 10,000,000 tons.

Brokers' Loans Up $31,000,000

Loans to brokers and dealers in the week ended September 1 totaled $1,117,000,000, up $31,000,000 from the week before, but compared with total of $1,84,000,000 for the same week a year ago.

Loans made for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities amounted to $275,000,000 up $8,000,000.

AUGUST Dividends GAIN

PROGRESS LESS RAPID

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Sept. 3—Among the interesting statistics for the month of August are those concerning dividends declared by corporations, and new security issues. As to dividends, an examination of the data shows gains, but makes it fairly clear that the progress made has become less rapid.

The total amount of corporate dividends declared in August was about $235,000,000. This compares with about $234,000,000 in August, 1936, or a gain of approximately 1½ per cent.

Such a gain seems to prove that corporate earnings as a whole have withstood the numerous difficulties connected with strikes and business anxieties fairly well.

The showing suggest that, on the average, the leading business corporations have been able to declare dividends that are not very far out of line with the general trend of earnings. It has been usual to declare dividends that are not very far out of line with the general trend of earnings. It has been usual to declare dividends that are not very far out of line with the general trend of earnings. It has been usual to declare dividend record is the best for the month since 1930. That has been about the general showing made by the statistics of activity.

It must be admitted, however, that in August total production did not exceed 108 per cent of the 1923-25 averages, while it has been running above this per cent the year. And I note that factory employment and payrolls are appreciably above last month in 1936.

MORE DATA

Following up the line of thought, we find that the dividends declared for the year 1937 to date exceeds those declared in the first eight months of 1936 by about 20 per cent. This the gain for August was less than for the rest of the year.

Another interesting point is the fact that the August declarations were made by 880 corporations the year against only 721 last year. The 880 corporations in August directly company has declined.

Further light is seen in the larger number of extra dividends. Fifteen companies declared smaller dividends in August this year. A year ago there were only four.

The story of a slowing up in the gains is clearly told by the fact that the number of corporations resumed dividend payments in August. But this year only four companies resumed.

Further light on the dividend record is made available by the returns for particular industrial groups. Perhaps the most notable is the increase in the amount of dividends declared by the motor and motor equipment industries as a further sign of revival. Eleven dollars last year to 47.2 million dollars this year, and the latter from 5 million to 6.6 million.

Aside from the tax on corporate surplus, such declines reflect stickiness higher wages and material costs, price uncertainties and reduced quantities of goods bought by city dwellers, the curtailment of vacation trips, weather conditions and possibly some price resistance. The latter may have been increased by growing price maintenance tactics on the part of standard articles.

DECLINE IN NEW ISSUES

Whatever the particular reasons for the tapering growth of dividends, we should note the distinct decline in new issues. August bond issues were the lowest since September, 1934. Stock offerings were the lowest since January, 1936. This fact shows financial and business uncertainty.

New security issues are usually barometric. We have had a spurt of bond issues, and as usual in such a period, stock issues followed new stock issues have begun to follow. Now there developments are being checked.

They had not gone far, however, and most of the bonds have been for refunding. All tend in order to restore employment for labor and capital, and with that a continued increase in wages and dividends, is a fair chance for private saving, investment and enterprise.

Packard Exports Show Sharp Gain

At meeting of foreign distributors and dealers of Packard Export Corp., Alvan Macauley, president and general manager said exports of 1937 Packards would be well over double the figure of last year. About 8 per cent of Packard's U. S. production is exported to its more than 100 dealers in 60 foreign countries. Of these, European markets take about 30 per cent.

Introduction of the Packard au served to stimulate foreign sales during the present model year and while 1938's model may not be expected to be well over 1937, the gain will not be as large as that shown by the 1937 model.

Banks See Fall Loan Increase

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

While various commentators sunk into the depths of despair by lower markets are viewing fall business prospects through blue-tinted glasses, the hard-headed banking fraternity is looking for better things and the increases in commercial loans, reported by weekly Federal Reserve statements, provide significant support.

Reporting member banks in New York City invested their fifth consecutive increase and were credited September 1. While the actual gain was only moderate it is significant that because it seems intact the record of decreases at a time when heretofore one the after Labor Day spurt of activity is awaited and spend because it supplies the reported expectation of bankers that from now on increase the fall and early winter will show a greater substantial gain. With such trends and subdued optimism in order, the more conservative estimates of the future of the business seem to be fully justified.

The steel stocks have probably found the going about as difficult as any other section of the list. In fact it might be said that they have not missed being the downside leaders by a very wide margin. The reasons offered for many, but not varied in that they relate to volume and profits. For instance, at a time when sales are said to be declining there is a fear that the Neutrality Act will be invoked against both China and Japan thus shutting off a reported substantial demand. At the same time domestic business is reported to show great improvement. Finally the writer understands that the industry will be asked to grant further wage increase the first of the year.

In the light of these actual and probable happenings it says the investment public views with evidence caution this issue. Earnings estimates have been reduced and there is limited disposition to look for immediate profit margins. All of which seems to be regarded as the situation is to be regarded as merely an unwarranted bullish enthusiasm which began a few years ago and which has been reversed in one outstanding and notable instance.

In viewing the current market and attempting to correlate it with actual business at a time of protracted sideslip movements of both are overlooked. In calmer periods it is generally admitted that neither marches from depression lows to prosperity peaks without hesitation. Such appears to be the present case and the best way for individuals to grasp the fact now when they are worried over conditions is to obtain an up-to-date chart of trade lines and stock prices and compare them with the past. It will readily be seen that the sharp upward movements which began a few years back have simply been resting and that such resting spells in the light of past performances do not warrant jumping to the conclusion the end is here.

If the rail markets in business and trade are to wind up their respective movements on the downside fashion they will do so in a burst of optimism that refuses to be evidenced over the rumbles of the crises. We think this will again prove true despite the entrance of new political and corporate factors.

Notebook: We understand that Carrier Corp is doing about 40 per cent of the business in the field and that it is also making parts for General Electric and American Radiator. American Power & Light refinancing is due this fall. Budd Manufacturing is expected to show about a dollar a share this year. Wills sales for the whole period touching close to the $30,000,000 mark. Half of which appeared in the first half. International Tel seems to have been unfair bear target on China war head. Last year its telephone properties there only earned $350,000 and manufacturing properties $50,000 on sales of about $1,000,000. The combined profit on a per share basis was only about 7 cents.

STOCKS Stage Good RALLY

VOLUME SMALL

New York, Sept. 3—Stocks recently under pressure took the offensive in today's market and rallied fractions to 3 points generally. There were a few wider upswings. The principal cloud on the comeback was the smallness of volume. Several issues jumped 2 to 3 points on single sales. Leaders were moderately under their tops later.

Brokers attributed the upward reversal partly to short covering. General Motors, which yesterday was believed the list had been overbought and was due for at least a reaction, recovered.

CURRENT TOPICS

Many analysts scanned weekly and trade reviews which generally found improvement in retail distribution but reported slowly extending differences elsewhere.

Dun & Bradstreet reported that failures in the country as a whole for the month as a whole are off as much as 4 per cent from 1 per cent above the previous week and 7 to 14 per cent below the comparable period in 1936.

Wholesale dividends was added were added to urgent reorder demand for many products, although it was noted that many buyers continued selective and limited their purchases to current needs until after Labor Day.

The Review pointed to a drop in industrial production due to mid-summer shutdowns, to make room for the further curtailment of sports lines in some consumers goods industries.

N. E. Governors to Intervene in Rail Case

Washington, Sept. 3 AP—The governors of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts won authorization from the Interstate Commerce Commission today to intervene in reorganization proceedings of the New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company.

The governors' application said they sought to limit stock holdings of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and the Pennroad Corporation to 5 per cent. These companies now own 22.78 per cent of voting stock.

The governors contended that if the control continues the Pennsylvania system will be able to ... the New Haven system's traffic.

Opinions of Brokers

Not much is to be expected of the investment market until after Labor Day unless some unexpected and favorable development occurs in the Far East, F H Richardson, Scudgage & Co:

When the current wave of pessimism has spent itself a rebound again be possible to follow the more normal trend lines which develop.—E. Malloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

Whatever the main trend of the market may be, there is good basis for belief that prices should find support close to present levels and that a substantial rally, even though only technical, should then develop.—J. S. White, Josephthal & Co.

We believe that the market will give an ample time signal of its own that liquidation has run its course, that a base is being formed and that prices are about to reverse their present trend. Until such a signal or signals is evident, we feel that new purchases may continue to be postponed.—F. G. Blackburn, Paine, Webber & Co.

N. E. CRUSHED BY BLACK-ARMY AIR RAIDERS

(Along a line from Quincy Bay to the Taunton river's joining with the sea, a six-day sham battle is being fought with more than 200,000 "straw men." All the actual men taking part in the war game are 25th high-ranking officers from all northeastern states, located at Fort Devens. Each day the Boston Evening American carries latest developments in this mythical war.)

All New England was at the mercy of Black Army airmen today as a result of a series of smashing raids by the flying forces set by the leading troops.

Shattering the Blue Army's air fleet, the enemy planes roared across a wide area dropping bombs on every airframe and munitions factory they could find.

The planes' bombers were piloted fearlessly by daring airmen who refused to stop and refuel during the ravaged hours.

FACTORIES DAMAGED

The most serious damage was done to factories in Massachusetts and Connecticut, which were almost obliterated by the falling rain and bombs were the following important targets:

United Aircraft Corp., East Hartford, Conn.; Curtis Propeller Factories, Hamilton Standard Propeller Co., Manchester, Conn.; New Haven, Conn., Remington and Sidensky Arms Factories, Bridgeport, Conn., Sikorsky Aviation Corp., Stratford, Conn., Bassett and Lombard Gear Factories, Boston, Mass.

The targets will be kept in operation until a month days, it was announced.

At the first small advance reported by the fast moving air defense forces, the Blue Army's defense positions were bombarded by the enemy planes.

IT'S ONLY SHAM

Most seriously threatened with the 4th Division and the principal invading force under Major General Hugh A. Drum, the war is only a game, but makes believe.

Advancing in a single plane was Lieut. Col. Frederick Blue and the Blue defense forces, the war is only a game, but makes believe.

Let Us Act Now!

MASSACHUSETTS should act at once to protect children against criminals of the type of Chester Harris' slayer.

For every one of these crimes that result in murder and widespread publicity there are scores which, unreported in the newspapers, cause mental anguish and physical suffering through a lifetime to parents and their children.

Some persons are reluctant to believe that men of the type of the Cambridge boy's killer exist and are allowed to roam the streets and prey upon boys and girls.

For them this newspaper publishes today a "devil's sermon"—the purported confession of a man who, despite a record of conviction for sex crime involving a child, was turned loose under a lax parole system to despoil and kill.

As a State we have been criminally neglectful in our failure to provide children with the protection that the nation-wide increase in sex crime demands.

With appalling examples on every hand, from Boston to Los Angeles, we have no police especially assigned to guard against pedophilia, our courts continue weak in the handling of these cases and our institutions continue to turn loose the convicted offender, without effecting any cure, before his sentence is served.

IT MAY be that the Boston Evening American and other newspapers should share some of the blame because the revolting nature of these cases has prevented the frank discussion that might have resulted earlier in the means to end them.

The time has come when the condition must be brought into the open, when parents and the children themselves must be made aware of the menace and when our public officials must act.

Both Chicago and New York have recently formed Sex Bureaus to co-ordinate law enforcement agencies in the protection of children against the despoiler. This newspaper calls upon Police Commissioner Timilty and District Attorney Foley to do the same and suggests that similar action be taken in every large city in the Commonwealth.

Police must be especially assigned to guard against this type of crime and keep a continued check of suspects and known offenders who are loose.

Our courts must impose the maximum sentences in all such cases.

Our parole policy must be changed to assure that these maximum sentences are served so that there shall be no parole for any sex criminal.

This problem is both social and medical. The crime it represents is the worst. The victims are our most precious.

Let's put sham aside and really do something about it.

Don't Talk to Strangers!

By Nelson Harding

The Modern Woman

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

Governor Bibb Graves has appointed his wife to the Senate seat vacated by Hugo L. Black, confirmed by the Senate as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Graves is known throughout Alabama as "Miss Dixie" and is a lady of charm and intelligence, who would increase the Senate's Crossley rating for pulchritude.

It's a sign of the times. You can't keep a good girl down. They're even talking about a woman for Vice-President of the United States, and why not? Until Jack Garner came along nobody could see for years who was the Vice-President. He was the forgotten man. But that would never be true of a lady who seemed to preside over the upper House.

As it is the superior sex is coming along in politics. In the Senate there is Mrs. Hattie Caraway from Arkansas and in the House there are now four women, Mrs. Caroline O'Day, Rye, New York, Democrat; Virginia Jenckes, Terre Haute, Indiana, Democrat; Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Lowell, Republican, and Mary T. Norton, Jersey City, New Jersey, Democrat.

Why not, therefore, a woman Vice-President of the United States? I advocate the step as a move in the right direction in the interests of better government and a more gracious atmosphere in the Senate Chamber.

AT THE TOP

Women are doing some important work today in these more or less United States.

Down in old Kentucky, Mary Breckenridge is a white Red Cross in herself, bringing knowledge and health care and hope to mountain women and saving babies lives by the thousand. And what Miss Breckenridge is doing for the women in the far places in the jungles, the deserts and the mountains of the world, nurture him in trouble with marvelous fidelity for the generation of battle, murder and hate, and a more gracious atmosphere.

These wonders, talking about wonders, why there have been relatively so few famous women. I think I know part of the answer. Lack of opportunity.

It's only in the past twenty-five years or so that a woman has really had a good shot at the target. Always she had been shouldered aside.

The singing voice of woman has surely not changed since ancient times; yet until women had opportunity they produced no Patti or Melba, Schumann-Heinke, Sembrich, Pringle or Bori to match De Reszke and Caruso, Lawrence Tibbett, Richard Crooks and John Charles Thomas.

Likewise in acting—the one field in which women have equalled or even surpassed men. The moment it was considered decent to appear on the stage they had the opportunity, and they gave us Mrs. Siddons, Rachel, Bernhardt and Duse to match Booth, Salvini and Irving.

And on the present-day stage what woman would be a world music critician who would maintain that women are inferior to men?

GREAT, NOT BEST

Women are great actresses, but strangely enough they fail to make great creative dramatists. They are notable musical performers but not great composers are men. Women are excellent sculptors but they have produced no Phidias or Praxiteles or MacMonnies. They are fairly good architects, but have produced no Carl Ohlbergs.

Even in the field in which most women have devoted more thought than any, namely dress, the greatest creative men. Nearly all of the great chefs have been men, and the most useful household invention that requires real creative thinking must be credited to men.

But as I say, these are exceptions. Throughout the world, would a hundred years ago, the woman of the laboring and lower middle classes was a drudge. Her life was circumscribed. Her fate was either that of barren, twisted superfluous spinsterhood or the small Mat Hoff home and plans, or she married and went into a prolonged existence of housekeeping and child-bearing.

Decisions of this sort of thing and especially the ones needed to develop initiative, courage originality, independence in the female.

But give her time, say another thousand years or so and she will be the equal of the lucky male to bow his head and murmur, "Madam, I give you best!"

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Sept. 3—Thoughts while strolling: No one tops George White in giving a show biz that certain thrill. The triumph of a White production. Katharine Hepburn's self-assured gallivanting. Her pictures flattering forces. Everybody is tired of the immediate set as being dizzying boredom.

Add beauty: Children. The Bobbi daughter. Joan Crawford's mink. Always more or less impressive cigarette chain smoker. Mae Clarke, Twitter like Alice Brady. Woody Barrie is making theatrical history here exactly as he did in Seattle. What, become of Helen Morgan?

With feathered head-dress Lee Shubert would make a fine looking Indian. Herbert Swope seems to arrive everywhere on the last spurt of a foot-race. All the dance halls are featuring the Big Apple contests. That's the immediate set as being dizzying boredom.

Look alikes: Ray H. Van and Jimmy Durante. Jerome Kern's tunes always have pure melody instead of the usual semi-path. Nobody can twitter like Alice Brady. Woody Barrie is making theatrical history here exactly as he did in Seattle. What, become of Helen Morgan?

With feathered head-dress Lee Shubert would make a fine looking Indian. Herbert Swope seems to arrive everywhere on the last spurt of a foot-race. All the dance halls are featuring the Big Apple contests. That's the new step out of the South.

The lightest fellow on his feet for his size: Albert Keller of the Ritz. What a handsome villain William Rhinelander Stewart would have made in the old tenement and theirs. Wonder what the Duke of Windsor thinks about things by now?

Many society lasses became cafe-rôtie singing in the night clubs. Still others picked up pin money occupying seats at the ringside in newly opened cafes and supper places as sort of decoys.

But the newest wrinkle is the liquor salesgirl who acts much in the fashion of the wine agent in the Manny Chappelle days. She is paid a commission and given a generous expense account to organize parties and see that only certain brands are served.

One brand of Scotch whiskey became a best seller as the result of a dozen or so society girls booming it in this manner.

Still another French aperitif, little known outside of Paris, is being popularized the same way. Ladies must live.

Latest for poor little rich children: The portrait doll. A picture of the fortunate child is given the doll maker and the head is modeled in replica. In many cases original hair of the owner is used. Complete, $85 and upward.

There is one reputedly made for a grown-up Hollywood star that cost $500.

The generosity of doting rich parents is rather bewildering to one who considered grandma's reach into her silk pocket pearl de soie for her snap purse to be heaving a lot unmindful of the usual pennies-up munificence.

There is the boy, 17, for instance, sent to Europe for a two weeks' visit at a cost of $1,000. All for psychological experience, ship passage, hotels, fees, tips and on the day of his sailing he was given $5000 worth of travelers' checks.

Then those going into university after graduation from college, sent to Europe for a year's bachelor apartment, and ride with the family nose a week. The debutante daughter's coming-out party, with flowers, music, limousine liveries and orchestra arrangements everywhere. They are the ones who show much interest in careers but the great majority turn down quite generously. Indeed, there are no conspicuous cases of young men given such advantages who tired of it and got busy, for good and all, into the industrial world and are now established figures.

Yet to my notion parents take an awful chance.

One of those Noisy Nineteens was home in a quiet Class A setting last night. She was just up from the Hamptons and in a sepia and hell-bent to be heard and seen. First jabbering shrilly in French to the waiter captain so all could hear, then waving and hallooing across the room to this one and that and finally up in the upper register.

We shouldn't let such didos throw us, but we've reached the crotchety age where they do.

The more abundant life Riley Cooper has discovered the most contented man in the world is Sebring, Fla. He is due to look through the Sears Roebuck catalog and not want a thing in it.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

Once upon a time John Burroughs wrote a poem called Waiting. The first verse went like this:

Serene, I fold my hands and wait,
Nor care for wind, or tide, or sea;
I rave in no more gainful time or fate,
For lo! My own shall come to me.

The stars come nightly to the sky,
The tidal wave unto the sea;
Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high,
Can keep my own away from me.

Every little while someone sends me that poem. During these last difficult months it has received much more frequently, always accompanied by this statement: Isn't beautiful, Elsie? This is how I am trying to live my life.

And every time I read that poem I say to myself: Unfortunately I get a violent pain in the neck.

Waiting . . . waiting quietly and confidently . . . waiting forever and wise thing to do when you can't do anything.

POWER IS FAITH

Faith . . . there's tremendous power in faith. It will move mountains, but it won't move them alone.

You've got to do more than wait before your own will come to you. You must have more than faith to move mountains. Faith without works is a flop. You've got to show action.

The stars (rooms I, B.) come nightly to the sky,
The tidal wave unto the sea;
Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high,
Can keep my own away from me.

Don't you believe it? Plenty of things can keep your own away from me.

Your own stupidity.
Your own weakness.
Your own cowardice.

Your own personal dishonesty, your own carelessness and perhaps your own stubbornness can drive your own away from you. And if you think that God is going to send your own to you in spite of these handicaps you're just out of luck.

Waiting for fate to bring you your own, until you earn it . . .

Often you lose a man, also an enemy, by a job. The world owes me a living.

INSIST ON RIGHTS

That is not true. You're not entitled to a thing until you've fought for it. You have no rights until you establish them. No right to a job, no right to love, no right to happiness . . . no right to power, to position, to fame, to fortune.

All of these are blessed things to have, but they will not come to you automatically. And if, by good fortune, the chance to possess them comes your way, that chance will be to you good income, by your own determination and hard work you turn it to your advantage.

Don't sit around expecting luck . . . insisting on your right to happiness . . . wasting your time in self pity and resentment if you are unlucky, unhappy.

It's a mighty tough job to make your own luck, your own happiness as it is to brush your own teeth.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Helen Rowland

One of the great burdens which a man has to bear all his life is that of finding things for a woman to DO.

That is the great secret of why he has so many hobbies, why he has so much fun with golf, why he finds so much delight in fishing, why he will hurry home from business to be BUSY—that is the whole secret of why he works.

According to a man economist, the early Victorian architecture so prevalent in this country was a MAN'S idea. In those days men built houses with big, roomy libraries, dens and draped and lots of rooms to be cleaned.

But now their women hustling—and thank why the men were so contented.

The big apartment, which every housewife brags about, is a man's idea. What have you been doing with your little all day, dear? No doubt Adam asked it every time he came in from a hunting or fishing trip, with a rabbit . . . a mess of trout for Eve to cook.

Of course, there are some men who like their wives to be merely decorative and don't care how much time the Little Woman spends lolling around in the sun, being massaged or running around to beauty parlors, but so she doesn't get FAT and homely.

But nothing gives the average man such a big thrill as to come home and find his wife moaning over a rock mine or struggling with a pie-crust.

I know a prominent man who refuses to let his wife keep any female domestic help, because he says it gives her a chance to have something to occupy her time. But he keeps a maid to do all the husband-by chores around the place, run the out-exercise the dog and weed the garden.

TRYING TIMES

"After every Little Sweetie Pie has taught him to do the marketing, vacuum the rugs, wash dishes, make up the beds and do the building for her bridge parties, fix a two-pie meal—and then some—and because he feels that wife is as busy as a termite all day long.

In the days when men and women were cooks . . . window washers, dishwashers and chambermaids, it was no trouble at all to keep a woman occupied.

But now-a-days, with the labor-saving devices, ready-made clothes and ready-cooked foods about all a woman can do to fill up her TIME is to scatter her clothes and newspapers around the house and dress and cigarette ashes all over the floors and mess up the bathroom with shaving soap and wet towels.

And this is not enough to keep the Little Woman from having to run around to bridge teas, golf tournaments, moving-pictures and dancing and otherwise get into mischief.

Verily, these are trying times for husbands with jobless wives.

Gladly Offered Her Life

"A LITTLE child shall lead them." The command is as good today as it was twenty centuries ago when it found a place in the Bible. And tiny Shirley Krause of Denver proves it.

A victim of infantile paralysis, Shirley had been placed in the Far West's only "artificial lung." That coffin-like device was her life. Without it she could not breathe.

Then—suddenly—another little girl was similarly stricken. One "lung." Two breathless tots—one to live and one to die!

Which? Which to save and which to doom—that was the doctors' problem. Naturally they hesitated, delayed . . . prayed.

But tiny Shirley did not hesitate. "Give my box to the other girl," she bravely offered.

Fortunately the timely help of the Chicago American, which rushed an "artificial lung" by plane, provided new breaths for Shirley and prevented her voluntary death.

There's inspiration in this child's courage and saintly generosity. We need it, we adults—badly.

Somerville Makes a Test

THE nation will watch Somerville's attempts to become the "safest city on the North American continent."

The city, under the leadership of a municipal administration determined to end fatal automobile accidents, believes that slow driving will ban death from the highways.

What is more, the city resolves to prove its contention.

Already State signs permitting a 45-mile-an-hour speed have been altered to read 25 MILES.

And patrolmen have been instructed to arrest every motorist traveling more than that maximum speed.

Practically every other city and town in the Commonwealth will allow 45 miles an hour on State highways, and will make no attempt to revise the safety program advocated by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Goodwin.

Consequently Somerville makes herself the TEST CITY OF MASSACHUSETTS. She thus assumes the responsibility of proving that slow traffic is the safer traffic.

Will she succeed?

Good News for Italians

THE decision of WPA authorities to remove malicious references to the Italian people from its much criticized "Guidebook" pleases Massachusetts.

The relief writers' inference that pioneer Italians came to this State as "strike breakers" was an outrageous falsehood. It might have been expected in a volume written by Haile Selassie. Hardly in a work paid for with the American taxpayers' money.

The City of Marlboro, whose vigorous protests and threats of court action caused the deletion of this libel on the Italian people, deserves praise.

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

THE DEVIL WAS SICK, THE DEVIL A MONK WOULD BE; THE DEVIL WAS WELL, THE DEVIL A MONK WAS HE!" said Rabelais.

This question will be remembered by many who read the dispatch from Shanghai that "foreign and Chinese Christians packed churches of all denominations in the war-wrecked city today."

This is human nature the world over and from the most ancient time. When man is free of fear of sudden death, when life pursues its everyday course, he takes his religion and his God as a matter of course. When his life is in danger he suddenly remembers the grip of a superior force.

What have subways to do with civilization?

A New York lawyer who has just returned from Moscow becomes ecstatic over the "grandeurs" of the subway in the Soviet capital.

He says that the Moscow tube cost one-third of what it costs to build a subway in New York and suggests that the law in Stalin's vast convict-camp punishing graft by immediate death had something to do with it.

This subway in Moscow was built by forced labor. Wages were at a level, even in actual rubber or purchasing power, not far above the wage paid Chinese coolies.

The Moscow subway was built as were all public works in the ancient world—from the pyramids to the temples of Karnak and the pleasure palaces of Kubla Khan—by SLAVE-LABOR.

All the modern "improvements" of Soviet Russia are rising on pedestals of corpses and the broken backs and ill-nourished stomachs of a cowed people.

WHY IS A RADICAL A RADICAL?

This is one of the subjects under discussion at present at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association at Minneapolis.

We are all born radicals, conservatives or middle-of-the-roads. It's in the best of the blood. It is in the high or low vibration of the nerves. Imaginative persons are prone to be radical. Reasonable persons tend to be conservative. The middle-of-the-roader is generally philosophical—he sees that radicalism and conservatism are two sides of one shield.

In politics today the professional radical is really a reactionary—for he is trying to reinhabitate the divinity of the State. He is going back to Mumbo-Jumbo. And the conservative may be the more "progressive" of the two—for he believes, particularly in this country, in sticking to that most radical of all principles—INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY AND CONSTITUTIONALISM.

But names mean nothing. One is either a COLLECTIVIST (a Socialist, a Communist or a Fascist) or an INDIVIDUALIST—that is, a Jeffersonian Democrat.

No greater cure for ennui—a French word for "in the dumps," a modern, ungainly, emptiness—than a hobby, particularly an intellectual hobby.

Be a little "nutty" about something. Cultivate that odd kink in your brain. Get interested in something, so passionately that when your wife calls you the third time for dinner you do not hear her.

Stick your finger in your dictionary anywhere. Pick the first word you see—maybe it will be Feudalism. China. Troubadours. Florentine or Dutch Still art. Feudalism or China for a month. Read all you can about the subject you have chosen. Bore people with all you know about troubadours or Lincoln, for instance. Study your subject like novelists write—by becoming the thing you are studying.

Have your hobby or hobbies. It lays the bogie-man of boredom.

Greater London now claims 8,203,351 persons. New York has something over 7,000,000, while the metropolitan area—that is, a circle of 40 miles, with its center in City Hall Park—would probably stack up to 10,000,000.

The City of London itself is a square mile, with a total population of about 13,000 at midnight and about 2,000,000 at noon.

The same thing, on a smaller scale, is true of the Wall Street District in New York. Its population probably runs to three or three thousand at midnight to a million at noon.

Men are wide apart in thought as Jean Jacques Rousseau and Oswald Spengler have blamed cities for all the evils of mankind. Rousseau called cities "the sinks of civilization."

As all first class cities through out the world are growing at a rapid rate, the control of civilization is bad—if you are a pessimist, like Rousseau or Spengler.

Bible Text: I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills whence cometh my help.—Psalms CXXI, 1. Suggested by the Rev. Leonard B. Gray, First Congregational Church, Lebanon, N. H.
